Fay Accused Of Coolness To Senate 'Tap' Probe

Blast of Criticism By Neely Reported Over Jury's Failure To Take Any Action

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

United States Attorney George Morris Fay caught a sharp blast of senatorial anger yesterday in a closed-door hearing where he denied ever having ordered police wire-tapping.

Fay spent more than an hour before the Senate District wire tapping inquiry committee headed by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

The District Attorney was understood to have been greeted with a barrage of criticism from Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), a member of the Pepper group.

Neely was reported to have accused Fay of pouring cold water on the inquiry. Basis of the reported accusation—which Fay denied—was Fay's explanation last week of the Federal grand jury's failure to return indictments in the alleged wire-tapping of Millionaire Howard Hughes' hotel phones by Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon of the Metropolitan Police, and police aides of Shimon. Shimon was assigned to Fay's staff at the time.

Disclaims a Whitewash

Fay last week, after the end Friday of the three-year period fixed by the statute of limitations for an indictment in the alleged Hughes wire-tapping of 1947, told reporters all the evidence had been presented and that it was not a whitewash.

Neely left it to Pepper to describe the closed-door meeting, and Pepper made no mention of how Neely grilled the District prosecutor.

But Pepper did quote Fay as having vigorously denied he ever intended to throw cold water on the Senate investigation.

Pepper disclosed that two other pointed questions had been put to Fay about the background of the current wire-tapping probes.

One question was why the Justice Department kept for a year the Metropolitan Police Department's report on Shimon's alleged wire-tapping in its files. The answer by Fay, according to Pepper,

O'Dwyer in D. C., Reported Slated For Envoy's Post

By The Associated Press

Mayor William O'Dwyer arrived last night from New York amid reports that he is slated to become American Ambassador to Mexico.

He refused to make any comment when asked about reports that have circulated for some time.

O'Dwyer is serving his second term as New York's mayor. He drew $25,000 during his first four years but this was upped to $40,000 last January.

An Ambassador is paid $15,000 a year, but as a former mayor he would be eligible for pension of about $15,000 also.

Falls Church Choses New City Manager

R. S. Braden, Replacing Wells, Is Third Man In Post in 12 Days

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

In a surprise move last night the Falls Church City Council, breathing peace and harmony, unanimously voted to accept the resignation of City Manager Harry Wells, and appoint Roy S. Braden in his place.

Braden, past president of the International City Managers Association and Arlington County's first county manager, was given the job "at a rate of $12,000 per annum."

In a statement to the city council, Braden, 61, said he recently resigned as city manager of Raleigh, N. C., because "I felt I've had enough city managering at my age."

He said the Atomic Energy Commission offered him "an excellent job—a job I would accept," indicating that he considered his present appointment temporary.

He also said that he had told councilmen in a private conference earlier that "I am buying a home up here and I told them I would help them out. I didn't promise how long I would stay—a week or a month—while I am getting moved in."

Last night's council session was in marked contrast to meetings during the past two weeks, highlighted by wrangling among council members and observers over the dismissal of Acting City Manager Roy F. Dunn, and the appointment of Wells.

Dunn, who started as town manager of Falls Church in 1947, was replaced by Wells as city manager on August 2 by a 6-to-2 vote of the council. Councilmen Samuel McCrary and James E. Durant opposed the action. Subsequently, McCrary and four other persons secured a temporary injunction in Fairfax Circuit Court restraining Wells from performing

GOP Charge Splits Senate Policy Group

Angry Clash Leaves Committee Divided Along Party Lines; Spreads to Floor

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Members of the normally nonpartisan Senate Foreign Policy Committee split down party lines yesterday with each side accusing the other of "playing politics" with foreign policy and the Korean war.

The debate, first of its kind since World War II, began in a sharp exchange of statements and finally spread to the floor of the Senate.

Ranking Democrats on the committee kicked it off with bitter denunciation of a statement issued over the weekend by four Republican members of the committee.

The GOP statement criticized our foreign policy "leadership" in the past and charged the Democratic Administration gave Russia "a green light to grab whatever it could in China, Korea and Formosa."

Charge Blow to Cooperation

Democrats charged the statement dealt a damaging blow to bipartisan cooperation and put the Korean war into the November campaign.

The Republicans replied that they had merely issued a "factual" statement and they would continue to strive for "100 percent bipartisan foreign policy." They insisted, however, that "bipartisan agreement never has applied to the Far East.

Later in the day, one Democrat, Senator Pat McCarran (Nev.), joined the GOP attack on Far Eastern policies. McCarran charged the United States contributed to the defeat of the Chinese Nationalists by "negative, unrealistic policies." The Nevada Democrat urged the United States to "get behind" Chiang Kai-shek and build him up as "a rallying point for the non-Communist Chinese."

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Texas) aimed the first blast at the statement by the four GOP members. Connally called it "a plain and palpable political statement" and said it is "patently intended to influence the coming election."

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) called it a "crafty" statement issued by "masters of hind-

D. C. Pollen Count Triples Itself In Day's Time

Washington's pollen count stood at six grains per cubic yard of air yesterday—triple Sunday's count and a sure sign of the sneezes, snuffles and sniffles to come.

Prepared by Dr. Eloise Kailin, a Washington allergist, the count represents the grains of ragweed pollen in the air for a 24-hour period that ends at 9 a. m.

Dr. Kailin makes the readings daily for the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and for the American Academy of Allergy.

Each day until the end of the season, the count will be included in the weather details at the top left of The Washington Post's first page.

Hay fever sufferers, Dr. Kailin said, have varying degrees of susceptibility. Some start sneezing when the count is one.

Last year's top reading—as an idea of what's ahead—was a sinus-tickling 292, she reported.

Plus More Financial Security

Increased Job Opportunities For Aged Urged by President

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

President Truman last night urged more work opportunities and better financial security for the Nation's increasing population of old folks.

Today's arbitrary age limits, he said, "are depriving the country of some of its best workers."

The President sent his message to the National Conference on Aging at the Hotel Shoreham, where it was read at a dinner meeting by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

"This country cannot be satisfied with merely extending normal life expectancy," Mr. Truman said in his message.

"The great gift which medical science and an increasingly healthy society have given us should not be more years on the shelf, but more years of productive activity."

He called on the conference delegates for "imaginative thinking," particularly in problems of health, housing and recreation which face older persons.

Arbitrary age limits on workers in business and industry should be eliminated, especially in view of the Nation's need for increased war production, the President advised.

This country, too, he noted, "has far to go yet before the Social Security system is satisfactory—and even then Social Security will be but the foundation for financial security in old age," he said.

President Truman said that older

Lieut. Thomas Buried At Arlington With Military Rites

They buried Lieut. Jerry Thomas in Arlington Cemetery yesterday. The rites were brief and simple—and yet they were special rites.

The services marked the death of the first District soldier slain on the Korean battlefield.

The services also marked, in the words of the family's minister, the fact that Jerry is "but the first of many—God only knows how many—fine young men like him who will be returned from Korea to their final resting place in this National Cemetery."

The Rev. R. Edward Dowdy of First Baptist Church, Washington, expounded the meaning of the rites.

Twenty-four-year-old Second Lieut. Howell G. Thomas, jr., the pastor said, "gave his life so that the United Nations might live." The minister paraphrased Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and called for a dedication by the living to the "unfinished work" of

To End Stalemate

India Suggests Small Nations Prepare Korean Peace Plan

Lake Success, Aug. 14 (AP).—India suggested today that the United Nations Security Council entrust to its six small-nation members the task of drafting a Korean peace plan.

India's chief delegate, Benegal N. Rau, told the Council frankly that the plan was designed mainly to end the procedural stalemate that has increased rather than reduced "tension between the two great powers."

The proposed committee would include representatives of India, Yugoslavia, Cuba, Egypt, Norway and Ecuador and would act as a sort of "Little Security Council" with powers to make recommendations to the full Council.

The main advantages, Rau said, would be that the committee could meet in private or in public, could hear any person it pleased, and none of the members could be suspected of any expansionist ambitions.

The Indian plan came as a surprise to all but a few delegates who had been consulted privately in advance. Rau said he would formalize the plan into a resolution if he received enough support.

Rau was one of four speakers who continued the non-Communist assault on the way Russia's Jacob A. Malik has discharged his functions as Council president since he ended his boycott August 1.

France's Jean Chauvel charged Malik is aiding Communist North Korea by prolonging the procedural stalemate for propaganda purposes.

"To paralyze the Council, which has taken the responsibility for engaging the United Nations in the defense of the Republic of Korea," Chauvel said, "is to aid the North Koreans, the attackers of the Republic."

As for Malik's efforts to prove the United States the aggressor in Korea, Chauvel said, it is just another case of "pointing to a chair and calling it a table."

Chauvel chided Malik for playing a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde performance by speaking as representative of the Soviet Union and then, as Council president, agreeing with his own statements.

Antonio Quevedo of Ecuador accused Malik of violating Council rules repeatedly and ignoring the will of the majority.

Norway's Arne Sunde said he would not try to compete with Malik in his selected field of propaganda.

"If this were an exercise in propaganda, the president would graduate with high marks," Sunde said. "But this is not an arena for propaganda, Mr. President, but the Security Council, which must represent the interests of all 59 members for peace."

Rau, in submitting his suggestion, told Malik he had hoped with Malik's return to the Council that some settlement might be in sight, but that his hopes had receded somewhat now.

"The course of the debates in this Council has served to increase rather than reduce the tension between the two great powers," Rau said.

The Council adjourned until Thursday at 2 p. m., EST., to give members time to study the new proposal.

Secret Consistory Called

Pope to Proclaim New Dogma Of Bodily Assumption of Virgin

Vatican City, Aug. 14 (AP).—Pope Pius has called a secret consistory to make belief in the bodily assumption of the Virgin Mary into Heaven a dogma of the Catholic church, it was announced today.

The dogma will be the first added to the doctrine of the church since the infallibility of the Pope was declared by the Vatican Council, July 18, 1870.

L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, made the announcement on the eve of the Feast of the Assumption—August 15—which has been observed by Catholics for centuries.

L'Osservatore Romano said the secret consistory of cardinals has been called for October 30, and that Pope Pius will proclaim the dogma on November 1.

Thousands devoted especially to the Virgin Mary, mother of Jesus, then will be assembled from all parts of the world for one of the most important events of the 1950 Holy Year. The delegates are bringing thousands of statues of the Virgin from noted shrines.

The proclamation will compel all members of the church to believe that the mother of Jesus was borne bodily into heaven or expose themselves to heresy. Belief in the assumption has been nearly universal in the church. Pope Benedict XIV, who reigned from 1740 to 1758, declared "it is a probable opinion which to deny were impious and blasphemous."

The modern movement to have the belief included as Catholic dogma was started in 1863 when Isabella II, Queen of Spain, asked Pope Pius IX for a papal ruling on the matter.

On May 1, 1946 the present pontiff in a pontifical circular asked prelates of the church to express their opinion. Vatican sources said in recent years 113 cardinals, 2523 patriarchs, archbishops and bishops, 82,000 priests and 8,000,000 other Catholics have asked for proclamation of the dogma.

A few bishops expressed fear declaration of the dogma might deter dissident Christians who might otherwise return to the Catholic Church. The Society of Jesus replied that similar fears were expressed when the dogma of the immaculate conception was proclaimed in 1854. This is the dogma that the Virgin Mary was conceived without the stain of original sin.

Catholic belief in the bodily assumption is based on the statement of St. John of Damascus, born about 676, that her tomb, when opened upon request of St. Thomas, was found empty and the apostles therefore concluded the body was taken up to Heaven.

The Catholic Encyclopedia says the day, year and manner of Mary's death is not known certainly. The dates for it vary from three to 15 years after Christ's ascension. Two cities claim to be the place of her departure, Jerusalem and Ephesus. Her tomb is at Jerusalem.

Cruiser Shells Railroad Yard Far to North

Hits Within 100 Miles Of Soviet Territory; 10 Red Vessels Sunk

Tokyo (Tuesday) Aug. 15 (AP).—An American heavy cruiser ranged to within 100 miles of Soviet Russian territory to shell military targets on the North Korean east coast yesterday.

A Far East naval headquarter's release today said the cruiser went above the Forty-first Parallel in quest of worth-while targets. It opened its guns on unidentified railway marshalling yards, factories and bridges.

This apparently was the northernmost strike by Allied naval forces.

Simultaneously a patrolling naval plane and South Korean naval craft sank a 200-ton enemy vessel and nine junks on the west coast of Korea. The American plane accounted for the 200-ton craft.

Another patrol plane roaming far up the east coast damaged a North Korean vessel with rockets. The United States plane was slightly damaged by antiaircraft fire.

The South Korean naval units caught the enemy junks on the approaches to Inchon, port of Seoul, former South Korean capital. They also moved in close to shore and demolished two blocks of Communist barracks with their shell fire.

Off the south coast of Korea, while their carriers were skirting the edge of a small tropical storm, Marine fliers took off to give close support to American ground forces in the southwest: Marine Corsair pilots reported they wiped out one troop concentration near Sachon, in the far south, with 500-pound bombs, rockets and jellied gasoline fire bombs.

Dependents Not Covered Now

Congress Works on Loophole In GI Pay Allowance Statute

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Congress is rushing to plug a major loophole in the expansion of the armed services—the fact that the present law provides no pay allowance for the dependents of a mobilized soldier.

In the rush, the families of newly mobilized servicemen are feeling the pinch.

The House Military Affairs Committee has held three emergency sessions, with a fourth scheduled for Wednesday. The Senate Armed Services Committee has held one meeting and the second is scheduled for 10:30 this morning.

Under consideration is one bill which would give a serviceman's wife $75, and each child, $25. The serviceman would have to pay $30 of the $75 his wife would receive, but would have to contribute nothing toward the $25 allowance for each child.

Under the present law, servicemen who went on duty after October 1, 1949, or whose enlistments have expired since that date, receive no allowances for their dependents.

The bill under consideration, introduced jointly in the Senate by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), and in the House by Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), embodies these other features, according to Col. Mark Galusha, of the Senate Armed Services Committee staff:

1. Allowance for one depend-

U. S. Flank Is Menaced; Planes Hit at Bridgehead

New Threat Is North Of Battle in Which Americans Push Foe Back as Far as Mile

Tokyo, (Tuesday), Aug. 15 (AP).—Bloody battles flamed in the curves of the Naktong River today as Communist commanders shoved more troops across in an attempt to breach Allied defense lines.

Field dispatches reported two battalions of Reds, numbering more than 1000 men, poured across the Naktong Tuesday morning about 14 miles southwest of Taegu, key American communications base.

The crossing, in the Tuksong bend, is on the southern flank of the central front where the Reds have massed 60,000 men for an all-out drive on the river barrier protecting Taegu.

A headquarters operational summary said U. S. First Cavalry Division troopers killed 1000 Communists in the same area Monday in repulsing a previous crossing near Tuksong.

These crossings threatened the northern flank of the United States 24th Division, engaged in a major counterattack against the North Korean Fourth Division in the Changnyong bulge just to the south. Changnyong is 23 air miles southwest of Taegu.

The 24th beat off a series of tank-led counterattacks during the night, then resumed its push this morning. But at 10 a. m. the briefing officer said, it was "proceeding slowly."

The Americans have advanced roughly a mile along the front, squeezing the enemy into a narrowing foothold on the river's east bank. The front was narrowed to five miles—one mile less than when the American attack started Monday. At its deepest point the Red footholds extends a little more than two and one-half miles from the river.

The 24th division regained its first objective by capturing the northern end of a dominating ridge where they dug in Monday night. The Reds attacked during the night.

The big Red push in the Waegwan sector so far had failed to develop as expected Tuesday on the fifth anniversary of Korea's

Victory Assured, Truman Declares In Note to Rhee

President Truman said yesterday that "victory is assured" in Korea.

His confident statement was contained in a message to President Syngman Rhee of the Republic of Korea, which follows:

"On this second anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of Korea, which finds the United States and other members of the United Nations aiding your people in the common purpose of repelling a savage and ruthless Communist invader, I convey to Your Excellency and to the people of Korea the good wishes of the people of the United States. The American people have watched with great satisfaction the impressive achievements of the Republic of Korea since its founding two years ago. I know that the aggressor will be repelled and that the people of Korea will achieve the freedom and independence which are their natural right. By a stanch adherence to the principles of right and democracy, victory is assured."

Excess-Profits Tax On Individuals Eyed

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday voted 7 to 2 for staff studies looking to the possible imposition of an excess-profits tax in 1951 on individuals as well as corporations.

The motion postponed any immediate action on controversial excess-profits tax proposals and failed to make any flat commitment on action next year.

But one member of the committee, Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.), said he regarded the vote as "notice to all corporations that in all probability an excess-profits tax will be enacted next year, effective January 1, 1951."

"I think the committee is for an excess-profits tax on corporations, but decided not to include it in the present tax bill," said Hoey.

Extension a New Wrinkle

Study of possible extension of the profits levy to individuals was a new wrinkle, previously only discussed in the cloakrooms. Individual profits were taxed in World War I, but there was no such levy in World War II.

The motion called for extending the tax to business partnerships as well as individuals. A separate motion directed staff tax experts to explore the feasibility of a national retail sales tax and a transactions levy.

Senators Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) cast the two votes against delaying action on the profits tax pending completion of the study, expected to take about four months.

Connally, who favors immediate imposition of a profits tax on corporations, said the vote on postponement wasn't a clear test of committee sentiment and he intends to move later for a showdown vote on making the tax a part of the President's "interim" bill.

Not Asked by Truman

In recommending a five-billion-dollar increase in individual and corporation levies—since approved by the committee—President Truman did not ask Congress for an excess-profits tax. But he recently indicated he would not object if it is added to the bill.

Pressing with Connally for immediate excess-profits-tax action, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) has announced he will offer such an amendment on the Senate floor as a rider to the Administration's bill.

Colin F. Stam, chief expert of the congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, described the projected study of taxing profits on individuals and partnerships as well as corporations as "exploratory."

He said the staff would weigh the question of "how far such a tax should go, whether it should apply to individual businessmen, or to wage earners as well."

George Warns Corporations

Some viewed the 7-to-2 vote for the comprehensive study as strengthening the hands of a committee majority against the coming floor drive to immediately impose the profits levy.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) has warned he will move to recommit the tax bill for hearings if a profits amendment is added in the Senate, saying: "There will be an interim bill, or none."

A committee spokesman said yesterday's vote should be taken by corporations as their cue that if an excess profits tax is levied next year, no matter how late in the session, it would be collected from January 1, 1951.

"That's so they won't regard it as a retroactive tax, when and if it comes," he said.

Production Rate Reaches All-Time High

By The Associated Press

The Commerce Department announced yesterday that the national production of goods and services boomed up to an annual rate of nearly 270 billion dollars—269 billion, 900 million, to be exact—in the second quarter of 1950, the highest quarter on record.

The previous high was 267 billion in the last quarter of 1948.

The 270-billion mark represented a sharp climb from the annual rate of 254 billion in the last quarter of 1949 and 263 billion in the first quarter of this year.

Leon Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said last week that the country can and should raise the figure to 350 billion by 1955.

Personal spending for consumption rose 2 billion dollars, at the annual rate, but the department said this rise was accompanied by price increases and reflected little change in physical volume.

Private investments increased more than 5 billion, but government spending for goods and services stayed the same as the first quarter.

Transit Riders Change Courses In Mid-Court

The Transit Riders Association announced yesterday that it will discontinue prosecution of its case against radios aboard local streetcars and buses and will instead support similar suits brought by Attorneys Franklin S. Pollak and Guy Martin.

The cases are now before the Federal Communications Commission and the United States Court of Appeals here.

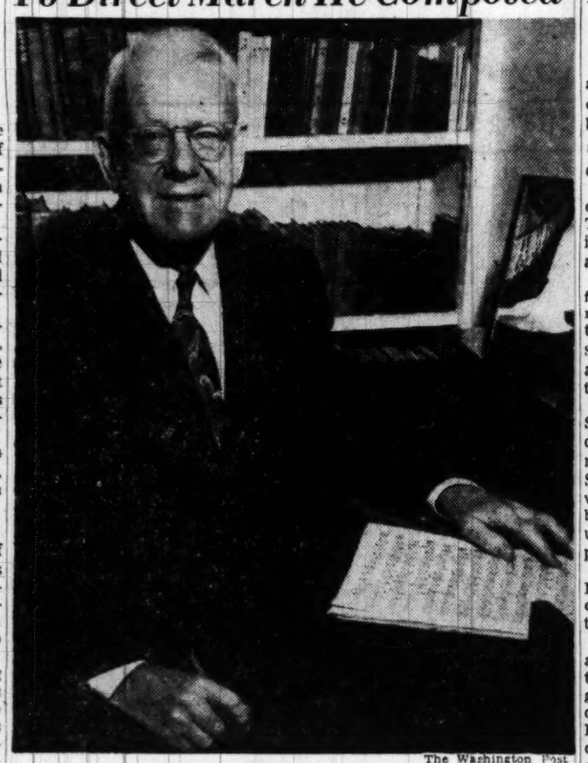
More witnesses will be heard Tuesday. That will conclude the present phase of the questioning here.

Jack Elich, committee special investigator, told newsmen the group might return to New York sometime later.

Retired Marine Band Leader To Direct March He Composed



The Washington Post
. . . Capt. Taylor Branson, USMC (ret.) and his new march

Emerging from 10 years retirement, Capt. Taylor Branson, 70, will once again appear before the public as composer and leader of the United States Marine Corps Band Wednesday.

He will lead the band at its 8 p. m. concert on the east steps of the Capitol in the premiere performance of his new "Benjamin Franklin University March."

The march is dedicated to John T. Kennedy, in honor of his twenty-fifth anniversary as president of the university.

Branson, who retired as leader of the band in 1940 after 41 years service, and Kennedy have been friends since the latter served as an officer in the paymaster's department of the corps in pre-World War I days.

The march honoring Kennedy was written—while wintering in Florida—by Branson at the suggestion of his son, Albert E. Branson, a member of the Benjamin Franklin faculty.

It is the first march Captain Branson has written since his retirement. All told, he figures he has written 10 or 12 marches. The best, he said yesterday, were: "Marine Corps Institute," "General Lejeune," "Marines of Belleau Wood," "Times-Picayune" and "Eagle, Globe and Anchor."

Captain Branson, who lives at 5310 27th st. nw., is a native of Washington. John Philip Sousa was the first native American to direct the band, but Branson was the first leader whose parents were both born in the United States. His mother was a Virginian and his father a Marylander.

He once described his father as "a country fiddler who couldn't read a note of music and vowed that he'd make a musician out of me to make up for what he had missed."

In September, 1898, during the Spanish-American War, he enlisted with the President's Own and in 1927 became its leader, serving in that capacity 13 years—one of the longest terms in the history of the band formed in Philadelphia in 1798.

During his long career, he was active in other organizations, among them the Gridiron Club of which he was musical director for 25 years.

Post Publisher Cites Need For Home-Front Sacrifices

Philip L. Graham, president and publisher of The Washington Post, said yesterday the immediate effect of the Korean war on American home life would be "a 30 to 40 billion dollar military budget increase."

He said our "constant living under the shadow of a direct, major attack" combined with the resulting drain on our economy of a 60 to 70 billion dollar national budget would eventually make life "more difficult than all-out war since this situation may have to carry over many years."

Graham told several hundred members of the Washington Building Congress at a luncheon meeting that the war will mean "a lowering of our standard of living; or, at any event, a change of our attitude toward living."

"The test," he said, "will be how long we can bear it without discouragement, and whether we can take a realistic attitude toward the future."

"It is easy to advise the military to 'drop the A-bomb,'" the publisher said. But just as General Bradley has said, and Korea proves, there is no 'push-button war,' so there is no 'push-button civilization.'

"Heaven," you will remember, 'helps those who help themselves,' and if we Americans will remember that, and remember it in our daily lives . . . we will shatter the ugly barbarism of communism and lead mankind on to its proper goal of peace and dignity."

Graham said Korea taught us that the armed forces are undermanned.

"This blame lies not entirely at the feet of Louis Johnson, but with all of us," he said, adding that he was "unaware of any public clamor last year for raising taxes 20 percent to support the kind of armed forces we need."

Another necessity, he said, is heavy rearming of Western Europe, because "we are in death's gamble since Russia will have soon the A-bomb plus ground armies and we have only A-bombs today."

Graham said we fought in Korea "not just because we opposed aggression, but because we had a good chance of stopping it.

"This is important to remember," he said, "because there are numerous areas of aggression where we have no power—and even no chance of creating power."

He said also that American newspapers have failed to make clear to their readers in many instances the nature of the Korean military operation.

"As a nation we have been puzzled and humiliated by the withdrawals," he said. "This is an ironic fact, since it is just this sort of withdrawal that was brilliantly performed by our revered American generals—George Washington and Robert E. Lee.

"Today, because of this withdrawal operation, and because of the most extraordinary manner in which we have sped men and supplies to the scene, it appears that we shall hold and go forward—unless the Soviets decide to widen the conflict by entering it themselves."

Senators Cautious, Confused In Wartime Controls Debate

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

The Senate moved cautiously and amid confusion yesterday in its consideration of a home-front mobilization bill that would give stand-by price, rationing and wage-control power to the President.

Debate became so involved at one point that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), asserted "this just illustrates we don't know what we are doing."

Taft contends there is no justification now for wage, price and rationing controls, said the controls section of the bill should be sent back to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee for further study and public hearings.

Taft made his point that the Senate did not know what it was doing during debate on an amendment offered by Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.), which would provide that no ceiling could be imposed in the meat industry unless a reasonable margin of profit is provided for each segment.

Taft read a letter from former President Hoover asserting such controls "tend to slacken the national effort."

"Our greatest domestic danger at this time is shock hysteria in the public, which leads the Congress to unnecessary surrenders of freedom," Hoover wrote. "The Korean war requires but minor controls, which can be carried by our economy with scarcely a ripple."

Wherry's proposal brought from Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) an amendment to guarantee a reasonable profit at all sales levels in all industries if price controls are imposed. Taft said singling out meat packers probably meant the Senate was going to make the same mistakes of the old Office of Price Administration days.

Taft asserted the Banking Committee should have worked out a formula for the fixing of price ceilings in all industries before reporting out a bill.

Capehart's amendment apparently caught Administration leaders by surprise. Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), Banking Committee chairman called the group together later to discuss the proposal and possible labor section changes.

The Senate approved a minor amendment to provide adjustments in ceiling prices for agricultural commodities to make allowances for increased costs and crop fluctuations.

Republicans, badly split over the bill, called a party conference for today to go over it. Senator Wherry, Republican floor leader, said he hopes for an agreement on the amount of time Republicans will want to debate the mobilization bill.

Vice President Barkley, after a White House conference, predicted the Senate would act on the bill this week.

Korea War Foreseen 2 Years

Toronto, Aug. 14—(AP)—Dr. Toyokiko Kagawa, Princeton-educated Japanese Christian preacher, today said he knew two years ago there would be a war in Korea.

Dr. Kagawa is to speak Tuesday at the World Convention on Christian Education.

"North Korea has a lot of natural resources, but it is short of food," the 62-year-old churchman said. "The South Koreans have lots of food and good land for crops. Even if we push the North Koreans back to the 38th Parallel, they will return. They must have food."

For Asiatics, he said, the battle for Korea is "merely a continuation of the Second World War."

"We have had no peace since the early 1930s, and, even though I'm sure Japan won't go Communist, I feel we are in for very hard times."

Pohang Field Is Kept Ready To Use Again

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Although aircraft have been evacuated from the Pohang airfield, the Air Force said yesterday, much heavy equipment has been left there with Air Force personnel on guard.

Evacuation of the field, a USAF spokesman said at the afternoon Pentagon briefing, curtailed fighter effectiveness over Korea only 14 to 15 percent, and then only during the one day the aircraft were being moved.

In answer to a question, he said the Korean situation was not "critical enough" to justify using the field under fire as on Guadalcanal in 1942. At that time, fighter aircraft flew from Henderson Field regularly, even though the field was under fire from Japanese artillery and warships.

The Air Force also reported North Korean use of a device employed by the Luftwaffe late in World War II: the "pacer" airplane. The spokesman said a B-29 flight returning from a strike near Seoul reported an "unidentified enemy fighter" flying above and alongside the bomber formation, apparently radioing to antiaircraft batteries its altitude, course and speed. This supposition was confirmed, the spokesman said, when shortly after the "pacer's" appearance, antiaircraft fire increased in accuracy and intensity.

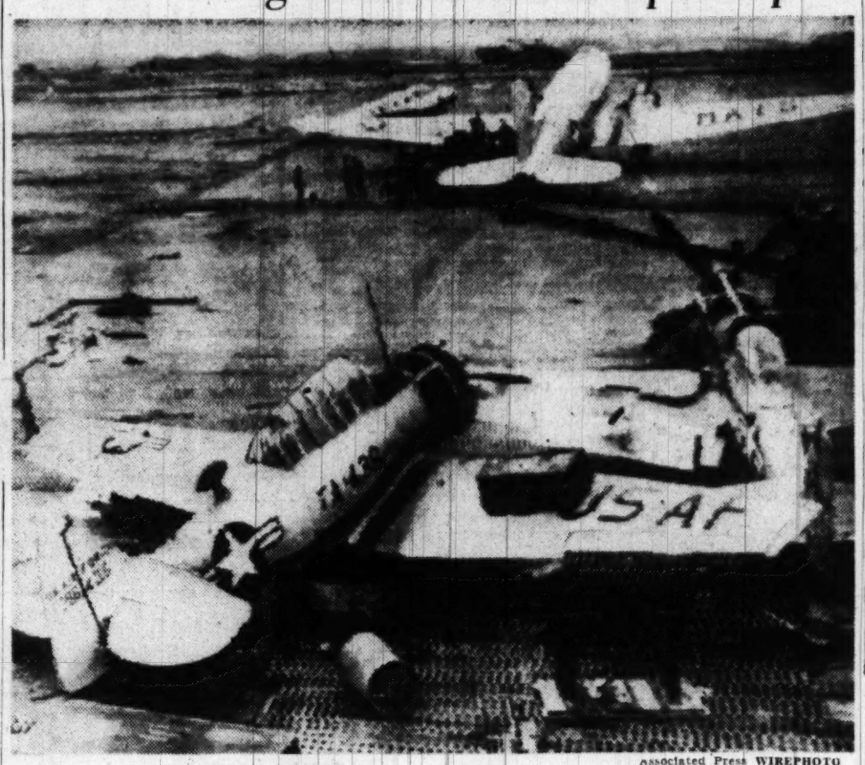
He said the same tactic, when employed by the Germans, was countered by sending fighters behind and above the bomber formation to take care of the "pacer" when it appeared.

Evidence of heavy construction under way at an airfield near Wonsan was reported by United States aircraft flying in that vicinity, the spokesman said. This work, he explained, appeared to consist of strengthening runways and adding parking revetments for aircraft.

While the Air Force spokesman would not speculate on the possible meaning of this work, it was regarded by some observers as forecasting a probable increase in North Korean air activity, which so far has been negligible. The fact that the work appears to include beefing up the runways suggests that it might foreshadow bombing attacks on Pusan, the east coast port through which the slow United Nations buildup has been filtering.

The Navy reported that Marine Corps fighter aircraft, for the first time, had provided air cover for ambulances removing Marine wounded from the battle lines. A communique said air cover was provided after ambulances and stretcher parties had been attacked by mortar and machine-gun fire.

Airmen Dug in Like Doughboys as Communists Neared Pohang's 'Cleveland Municipal Airport'



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THREATENED BY REDS—Leaving behind "cannibalized" planes (foreground), U. S. Air Force men load a transport plane at Pohang airfield just before evacuating the key east coast base. North Korean forces took the city of Pohang, 6 miles from the airfield, and for a time threatened the field itself. Yank ground troops, however, still hold the field. The city was reported in the hands of 200 Reds and guerilla forces

By Relman Morin

Tokyo, Aug. 14 (AP).—This is the story of the death of an air base.

A fighter pilot told it in broken bits, a few words at a time and then a long silence. There was pain behind his flat, cold tones.

Sometimes he called the air base "home" and then a frown wrinkled his brow. Mostly he just called it "the base."

The base is the one near Pohang that the Air Force abandoned in the teeth of Red attacks. It still is in American hands, defended by infantry and tanks.

But the planes and pilots have gone. This pilot was sorry to go.

He talked about the time they put a floor in the mess hall and the work that went into the few small comforts. "Not much comfort, I guess," he said, "but it seemed pretty good. The chow was good and you could get a can of beer sometimes."

He said the blue bay reminded him of the Golden Gate waters at San Francisco.

But they called it "Cleveland Municipal Airport" because so many of the men were from Cleveland.

The sign was still up, or he guessed it was, that they had painted, laughing, when the First Cavalry Division was due to land there. "Welcome First Cav! This Way to Cleveland Airport."

And the other sign—"If a medal you would win this is the place to begin." The pilot thought for a while, grinned and said, "Oh, yes, and then we had another too—"Welcome friends although you're slow—We knew you would come, you told us so."

A few days ago things began to go bad. Korean Reds appeared in force, attacked Pohang and slipped into the hills, the pilot said. "Couldn't tell who had the town. Some said we did. Some said the Gooks did. You couldn't tell." And the pilots began hearing bullets from the hills as they landed or took off.

Fliers Dug In

"So we dug in. Just like the infantry. In foxholes about 25 feet apart. We had carbines and pistols and a few liberated Soviet burp guns (automatic rifles).

"Had everybody in the foxholes, too—mechanics, pilots, K.P.'s and the C.O."

He smiled a little when he remembered their "alarm." They heard a sharp crackling noise inside the camp area and saw bright flashes.

"Hell, we all hit the dirt just like the GIs. Then one of your guys, some correspondent, got up to look and said it was just a couple of live electric wires swaying in the wind and touching."

He said: "You know, you guys write a lot of tearjerkers about the poor Korean refugees. Well, you can have them.

"Some refugees passed the camp after the fighting started in Pohang. Pretty soon we began catching bullets from the rear. Seach them? Sure, we searched them and they were clean as hell.

"They had their weapons stashed away in the hills. Those were your poor Korean refugees."

He didn't mention the bomb dumps just 500 yards away. He just said: "We had napalm (fire bombs) covering everything. If they got too close there wouldn't be any sweat about getting things out. It would go up, not out."

A man was killed by sniper fire from the hills the next day.

Then the day came when they were ordered to evacuate. The pilot paused for a long time before he finished his story.

"You could see the cooks through glasses by that time. So we started to move. It was just like a stateside move. No hurry. No sweat. The C-47s (transport planes) landed and we loaded them and they took off. The place looked pretty bare when the tents came down.

"I guess we will go back there sooner or later. Sure will seem good to get home again."

Indonesians Vote to Form Single State

Jakarta, U. S. I., Aug. 14 (AP).—Parliament approved the draft constitution for the new Indonesian state tonight, unifying the 15 other original states with the republic that spearheaded Indonesian independence.

There was no opposition to the new constitution in the Senate. The lower house approved it by a vote of 90 to 18.

Approval cleared the way for a three-day installation program, which will culminate in a formal flag-raising Thursday—the fifth anniversary of the Indonesian declaration of independence.

The new unitary state, to be called the Republic of Indonesia, will be proclaimed Tuesday by President Soekarno, who will formally transfer members of the U. S. I. House and Senate into a new single-house parliament.

Boisterous V-J Day of 1945 Barely Remembered Yesterday

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Someone, sometime during that fervid night in Washington must have wondered: What will it be like five years from now?

Hell was breaking loose that night in Washington—"staid" Washington. Everybody went just a little bit crazy! Victory was here. It was a town of joy, of noise. The records say so.

"Staid Washington," as The Washington Post chronicled it, "blew the lid off last night."

It was V-J Day.

"The war is over!" the paper reported.

"The victory of the United States and its Allies is complete and overwhelming. It has come according to the grand strategy . . . Nowhere on earth now—unless it be by mistake—are troops shooting to kill."

Last night—five years exactly—little groups of people walked toward supper. The streets were cooling off. They were wide, quiet and unhurried.

Somebody in a building above G st. was practicing on a trombone. F st. showed the usual end-of-day debris—cigarette butts, gum, candy wrappers, scraps of paper.

"Downtown Washington," The Washington Post said on August 15, 1945, "exploded into blaring noise and honest emotion. . . . The crowds shouted, shrieked and tore newspapers into confetti."

At 7:15 last night, two White House policemen said they weren't there, but they'd heard what it was like.

"It must have been something," one of the guards said. "Let's see, who was around then?"

Said the newspapers five years ago today:

"A pall of gloom which had hung over a crowd of 1500 people gathered before the White House vanished when the flash came in.

"The crowd . . . surged forward and swarmed past MPs when it had recovered from its first joyful realization."

Only the usual tourist guides and the usual tourists were in front of the White House last night. The "regulars" held their usual benches in Lafayette Park, but half the benches were empty. The pigeons strutted about.

Said The Washington Post five years ago:

"President Truman, standing behind his desk at the White House, made the historic announcement at 7 o'clock."

At 7 p.m. yesterday, a White House aide reported, the President and Mrs. Truman were settling down to dinner.

Washington had no official celebration yesterday. People scarcely remembered — until you asked them.

Aid to Korea Civilians Voted By U. N. Group

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 14 (AP).—The U. N. Economic and Social Council by unanimous vote undertook today to give any relief for the civilian population of South Korea that may be asked by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's U. N. command.

The council also asked its members to spread the "fullest possible understanding of and support for the action of the United Nations in Korea."

In presenting the resolution, Council President Herman Santa Cruz of Chile said "the criminal aggression perpetuated against the people of South Korea is an offense against the United Nations" and was designed to "destroy and annihilate" the U. N.

He said a "campaign of slander" even claimed that "the nation attacked was not South Korea, but North Korea."

The resolution authorized the president to reconvene the council whenever necessary to carry out its purpose of assistance to South Koreans.

Three members of the council, Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia, were absent. Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Denmark, France, India, Iran, Mexico, Pakistan, Peru, the United States and Britain voted for the measure.

4 Die, 8 Hurt In Crash of Superfortress

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 14 (AP).—A crippled B-29 bomber crashed and burned in a field 2 miles north of Carswell Air Force Base today, killing four crewmen.

Eight crewmen got away with minor injuries as the four-engined bomber narrowly missed a cluster of houses, struck the field and slithered almost half a mile. They tumbled from the Superfortress as it plowed crazily along the ground.

Three charred bodies were removed from the nose section of the plane and one from the center section.

The bomber was from Barksdale Air Force Base, near Shreveport, La. It apparently was trying to land at Carswell.

Mrs. A. L. Cronk of Lake Worth Village said she and her husband drove two of the surviving crewmen to Carswell base hospital. Both were dazed. One kept repeating: "I couldn't pull it up, I couldn't pull it up."

She didn't learn the fliers' names.

An explosion of fuel ripped the bomber as it ended its slide through the tree-studded field. Robert V. Bail of Fort Worth said he saw the plane circling with its left landing gear down but its right landing gear up.

Witnesses said it circled the field several times, apparently trying to land but in trouble. It was from the Ninety-first Bomb Group, Ninety-first Strategic Reconnaissance Wing, Second Air Force, Barksdale. The plane commander was one of the survivors.

Truman Urged Not to Name Vatican Envoy

Geneva, Aug. 14 (AP).—American members of the executive committee of the International Council of Christian Churches expressed to President Truman today their "unalterable" opposition to appointment of a representative to the Vatican.

President Truman said earlier this month that establishment of formal diplomatic relations with the Vatican is under study.

The committee has been meeting here in preparation for the second plenary congress of the council to be held August 16-23. Protestant leaders from 41 countries have begun to arrive for the session.

"In our struggle against communism, the prestige of our great free land must not be used to strengthen and advance the Roman Catholic Church," the message to President Truman said.

"In our struggle with totalitarian communism, we must not again make the mistake of advancing another for of totalitarianism of whose hands our Protestant fathers have suffered, with which the world may have to deal with the Communist peril has been faced. We strongly urge you not to connect our country directly or indirectly with the Roman See."

The message was signed by Dr. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches, of Collingswood, N. J.; Dr. W. O. H. Garman, president of American Council of Christian Churches of Wilkinsburg, Pa.; the Rev. S. P. Allen, secretary of the American Council, and representatives of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches.

Cub Scout Finds $41, Gives It to Police

Nine-year-old Robert W. Burton, jr., of 3722 R st. nw., performed his good deed as a Cub Scout yesterday by turning over to police a pocketbook containing $41 he found near his home.

The youngster rode to No. 7 police station on his bicycle with his find. Police said he can keep the money if it is not claimed in six months.

U. S. Emergency Radar Net Already Guards Against Raids

By the United Press

An emergency radar network protecting the Nation's vital industrial and security centers now is in full operation against a possible sneak air attack, an Air Force spokesman revealed yesterday.

Set up with World War II equipment, he said, these defenses will serve adequately until a permanent radar super-network can be completed. Air bases for speedy interceptor planes are part of the present plan.

"This emergency defense does not give complete coverage of the Nation," he said. "But it's concentrated on those areas most vital to the security and industrial potential of the war effort."

It was recalled that, despite this protection, in the last war some 75 percent of the bombers could be expected to get through if the attack were pushed in a determined manner.

The Air Force spokesman described the present radar defense as operating in two main rings. The outer ring extends along the Canadian border and at least halfway down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. This would guard against planes flying the North Pole route from Russia.

Inner rings provide specific protection for key areas in the northeast, central and northwest regions.

The Air Force also is working on the permanent $85,500,000 aircraft and radar control system authorized by Congress in March, 1949.

No funds have been put up specifically yet, but the lawmakers have authorized 50 million dollars in regular Air Force appropriations for purchase of sites and facilities for the network.

Red Cross to Train First Aid Teachers For Civil Defense

The District Red Cross is now organizing classes to train instructors in first aid for the civil defense program, it was announced yesterday.

Men and women over 20 years of age are eligible. Particularly needed are those who have an interest in medicine or with teaching experience.

Instruction will be held two or three times a week until 45 hours of instruction are completed. The classes begin August 21 at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw. There will be classes from 9 a. m. to noon and from 7 to 10 p. m.

3 Area Guard Units Go On Active Duty

Members of three area National Guard units answered their respective rollcalls at 0800 hours yesterday and went on active duty with the Army.

The three units, first to be ordered up here, were the 715th Transportation Truck Company and the 370th Signal Radar Maintenance Unit of the District Guard, and Battery B, 710th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion of Alexandria.

All three will probably spend the rest of the week at their respective armories undergoing physical exams and other processing.

The two District Guard units will conclude their preparations for going into training with a review before Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, commanding general, on Saturday.

General Abendroth has set up a special personnel affairs survey in which the men are receiving advice on financial and other problems coming up in the change to active duty.

Officers are trying to straighten out financial commitments and explain the rights and benefits to which the guardsmen are entitled while serving. Part of the work is the drawing up of wills and powers of attorney.

The 715th, commanded by Capt. Milton V. Seraile of 1100 21st st. ne., trained last month at Indiantown Gap, Pa., for two weeks with the District Guard's 171st Military Police Battalion and other units.

Captain Seraile in civilian life is a mail carrier for the District postoffice.

Commanding the small but highly specialized 370th Signal Radar Maintenance Unit is Warrant Officer Fred G. Kahlert of 3900 Northampton st. nw., who left the Army about a year ago after eight years in the Signal Corps.

The unit is part of the 260th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group of the local guard, and Kahlert served with the group in Hawaii and Yokohama during the war and occupation. In civilian life, he has been a radio mechanic.

The National Guard Armory is now a military post and members of the two units must obtain passes to leave the Armory. Some members of each unit will sleep at the Armory each night they are there, and a mess is in full operation.

Commanding Alexandria's Battery B, is Capt. Douglas W. Stanton, jr., clerk of the Alexandria Civil and Police Court, who lives at 1320 Martha Custis dr. in that city.

Meanwhile, units of the District Air National Guard continued their two-week summer training at Andrews Air Force Base and at Byrd Field, Va.

The 121st White House Squadron of jet fighters made 24 sorties over the Atlantic off Chincoteague, Va., and fired at sleeve targets towed by B-26s. Pilots also heard a talk on gunnery principles by Capt. Fred L. Webster, Air Force aerial gunnery specialist who tained many of the airmen now fighting in Korea.

At Byrd Field, Va., members of the 113th Fighter Group Headquarters of the D. C. Air Guard head Col. H. T. Leber of the faculty of the Air University at Montgomery, Ala., discuss the principles of war.

Marine's Family Here Facing Hardship

By Patty Goodwin—The Washington Post

A LETTER FROM CAMP—Mrs. John H. Barron, wife of a Washington police private who was mobilized last month, reads a letter from her husband, stationed at Camp Lejeune, N. C., telling her he is trying to get an allotment for her and their four children, from left, Mary Golda, 7; Horton, 14 months; Anne, 6, and John, jr., 4. Mrs. Barron doesn't see how she and the children can live on Sergeant Barron's $132.30-a-month pay ent parent, $75, of which the serviceman contributes $45.

Law Sought to Establish GI Pay Allowances

2. Allowance for two dependent parents, $90, of which the serviceman contributes $45.

3. Allowance for one child without mother, $60, of which the serviceman contributes $30.

4. Allowance for a divorced wife, without children, $50, of which the serviceman contributes $30.

5. The serviceman's contribution to dependent parents is only $15 if he also has a dependent wife.

During World War II, wives of servicemen received $50, of which the servicemen payed $28. For their first child they received $30 and for each additional child, $20.

Every effort is being made to finish hearings on the new legislation by Thursday, Galusha said. He members feel that the increase allowances are too high in view of the salary increases given most servicemen last year.

In the meantime, the wives of some newly mobilized servicemen are facing hardships.

Marine Sergt. John H. Barron, a police private, who was mobilized July 29 with the Fifth Infantry reserve battalion, is trying to support his wife and four children on $132.30 a month. He has not been paid since he arrived at Camp Lejeune, N. C.

"I don't see how we can live on that," Mrs. Barron said yesterday at her home, 2815 4th st. ne. "John doesn't want to get out now that the going is tough, but it's either that or something has got to be done."

Under the proposed legislation, Barron would receive an additional $145—$100 for his four children, and the $45 which the Government contributes toward the $75 allowance for his wife.

Her children are 7, 6, 4 and 14 months, and she said she was "strapped."

A Marine Corps spokesman said yesterday that in case of proven hardship a Marine can apply for a dependency discharge. Applications must be accompanied by an affidavit from the wife and one disinterested party, he said.

Boards passing on the calling of future Marine reserves, the spokesman said, will be authorized to grant dependency deferments in hardship cases.

Police Inspector John E. Fondahl, a Marine reserve conolel, and former CO of the Fifth Battalion, said several of his old battalion men had asked him for help. Fondahl said he had been told the proposed legislation is expected to pass in 10 days. "It's only a question of the amount of the dependency allowances," he said he had been told.

The Red Cross has already helped some service wives and yesterday offered to help more in cases of proven emergency need.

The Princes Georges County chapter has come up with $40 to tide over Mrs. Charles J. Buddington, Mount Rainier, Md., mother of two. Her husband, Charles, a mechanic and also a member of the Fifth Infantry Battalion, served 31 months overseas during World War II.

Mrs. Buddington received her second $20 from the Red Cross yesterday. "Our utility bills were coming due," she said.

A District Red Cross spokesman said the local organization could help families of newly mobilized servicemen on the basis of need.

Families should call Home Service at REpublic 5275 for assistance, the spokesman said.

CIO Expected to Expel 3 More Leftist Unions

Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 14 (U.P.). Three more "Communist-dominated" unions likely will be expelled from the CIO, O. A. Knight, president of the CIO Oil Workers International Union, indicated today in opening his union's annual convention here.

Kight named the three unions as Harry Bridges' Longshoremen, the Marine Cooks and Stewards and the Allied Fishermen. Knight served as chairman of a committee assigned by the national CIO to "try" the three unions for alleged Communist activities on the part of their leadership.

30 Women Recruits Start Naval Training

Thirty women Naval Reserve recruits, 12 of them District area residents, reported to the Receiving Station at Anacostia yesterday for two weeks of "boot training."

They are volunteer "seamen recruits" who have had no previous active service. After their two-week indoctrination at Papupent River Naval Air Station, they will return to their homes and become members of reserve units for further training in their specialties.

The recruits are scheduled to leave at 8:30 a. m. today for Patuxent, where they will be trained in military drill, first aid, swimming, Naval history and other subjects.

On the local recruiting front, the Navy yesterday tentatively accepted nine of 15 applicants for enlistment, and swore in one.

The Marines tentatively accepted four of 16 applicants, and enlisted one.

Britons Stand United Against 'Pool' Plan

Strasbourg, Aug. 14 (AP).—British Labor and Conservative members, in a rare show of unity in the European Consultative Assembly, made a strong attack today on the Schuman Plan to pool Europe's coal and steel.

German members of the 13-nation parliament, which can debate and recommend but not legislate, clashed with their British colleagues in a spirited defense of the Schuman plan.

Earlier, Constantin Tsaldaris, former Greek premier, proposed a short cut to begin immediate intergovernment talks to set up a unified European army. His proposal would give Assembly President Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium authority to enlist the aid of leaders in the national parliaments to pressure their governments into beginning direct negotiations.

Normally, all Assembly resolutions are forwarded to an upper house, or ministerial committee composed of a minister from each nation, where the measures are passed upon.

The Assembly approved a proposal by Winston Churchill of Britain last week that a European army be created under a European defense ministry.

The British are sponsoring a project to put the proposed coal-steel pool under the European council here. The British would thus have a veto over the international authority that would control coal and steel.

Maurice Edelman, Labor member of Parliament, and David Eccles, Conservative member of Parliament, both attacked the plan of French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman as "undemocratic" and a "menace to security."

Edelman said it would hamstring Western defense preparations.

"We were not and are not ready to delegate our steel industries to a supranational authority which in our view is arbitrary and undemocratic," he said.

Eccles said "it is possible to pay too high a political price for economic integration. Coal and steel are so vital to the life of the modern state that when it is taken out of the hands of a national government that government becomes the servant of the agency to which it is transferred."

Both Eric Noetling, a German Socialist, and Hermann Schafer, a German Free Democrat, strongly backed the Schuman plan. Both insisted on divorcing it from the European Council, where they said it would be torpedoed.

Both insisted that Germany should have full equality in the pool, however. Noetling said present limitations on steel production should be abolished, along with the international Ruhr authority, which now controls the bulk of German coal and steel production and distribution.

U. S. May Ask Further Increase in Arms Plans

The United States yesterday was reported ready to call on its Atlantic Pact partners to boost even further the stepped-up rearmament effort they have proposed.

Informed officials said the overall defense increases outlined by America's Atlantic Pact allies appear to fall short of what the United States believes is necessary to forge an effective barrier to Communist aggression in Western Europe.

American defense experts who have been analyzing the new programs, say that while they are "definitely a step in the right direction," few match in proportion the scope and speed of the United States rearmament drive.

His Frozen Body Found on Slope

Wife Joins Leopold in Brussels

Brussels, Aug. 14 (U.P.)—The beautiful common-born Princess de Rethy, wife of King Leopold III, returned to Belgium today for the first time in more than six years to share Leopold's last year as monarch.

The Princess, who expecting

The Princess, who is expecting Geneva, Switzerland, with Leopold, who left Belgium secretly early today and then accompanied her home.

Crown Prince Baudouin, now chief of state, met his father and stepmother at the heavily policed Evere Airfield. A 100-man air force guard of honor stood stiffly erect as the royal couple alighted from their army transport plane.

Secrecy surrounded the journey and there was no official announcement from the Government, which feared the Princess' return might revive the bloody demonstrations that forced Leopold to transfer his royal powers to his 19-year-old son by his first wife, Queen Astrid.

The Princess, the former Mary Liliane Baels, contributed to the anti-Leopold sentiment in French-speaking Wallonia. Leopold's wartime marriage to her was considered a breach of his promise to share the fate of his troops. Many Belgians refused to accept her as a successor to the beloved Astrid, who was killed in a prewar automobile accident.

In addition, her Flemish family was suspected of Nazi sympathies.

Congressional Leaders Expect No Defense Funds Hike Soon

Congressional leaders said after a talk with President Truman yesterday that they do not expect any immediate requests for still more military funds.

They made it clear this did not rule out the possibility of further requests in the next few weeks or months.

Since the Korean war began, Mr. Truman has asked about $16,500,000,000 of additional defense funds.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) told reporters at the White House he hopes the House can act next week on some 14 billion dollars of military appropriations, including the four billion dollars asked for arms aid to Allies in Europe and elsewhere.

The Democratic "Big Four"—Rayburn, Vice President Barkley, Senate Leader Lucas (Ill.) and House Leader McCormack (Mass.)—talked with the President for an hour about the legislative program.

The $16,500,000,000 of defense spending asked since the Korean war has run total arms-military requests over the 30-billion-dollar mark.

About $14,500,000,000 in defense spending was tentatively approved by the Senate and House in the one-package appropriation bill.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) expects to get some new cost data this week when his Foreign Relations Committee hears secret testimony by Secretary of Defense Johnson.

Connally said his group wants to review all defense plans at home and abroad in connection with the request for four billion dollars to speed the rearming of western Europe and anti-Communist nations.

"After all, the military picture has a direct bearing on foreign relations now," Connally said.

New York Lawyer Becomes Counsel To Harriman

Theodore Tannenwald, jr., 34, New York lawyer, has been made counsel to W. Averell Harriman, special assistant to the President on foreign affairs.

Tannenwald

Tannenwald has previously done Government service as assistant chief of the foreign funds control division of the State Department in 1942 and 1943, and after that as a consultant to the Army Air Forces in the European and Pacific theaters.

After the war he returned to private practice. From 1947 to 1949 he served part time as a consultant to the Secretary of Defense and later for the Air Force.

In his new position Tannenwald will be on leave from the law firm of Weil, Gotshal and Manges, in which he is a partner.

Political Prophet Sees Taft Defeat

By the United Press

Election forecaster Louis H. Bean predicted yesterday that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and several other Senate leaders—including both Democrats and Republicans—will be defeated this year.

He said the GOP will gain seats in Congress but not enough to recapture control.

Bean, and Agriculture Department economist who studies election trends as a hobby, made his predictions in the current issue of Look Magazine. He said they were based on a study of mid-term election trends over the last 100 years.

Although he is a Democrat and a strong Administration supporter, Bean has predicted with considerable accuracy some of the Democratic Party's losses in Congress during the last 14 years. He also predicted President Truman's surprise victory in the 1948 election.

In "Danger"

In addition to Taft, the Senate leaders he listed in danger of defeat this year included:

Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois.

Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania, the Democratic whip.

Senator Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado, chairman of the Senate Republican Conference.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

He did not single out the House members likely to be defeated but said Republican gains can be expected in the "political northeast" as follows:

Connecticut, three seats; New York, two; New Jersey, one; Pennsylvania, two; Indiana, one; Illinois, two; and Ohio, two or three.

The Republican Party would have to pick up seven more seats in the Senate and 46 in the House to win a majority in the two chambers.

Bean figured the Republicans may make a net gain of three seats in the Senate and 25 or 30 in the House. Thus, the Democrats would retain a majority in the Eighty-second Congress, but an extremely narrow one.

There will be 36 Senate seats to be filled this fall. On the basis of past performances, Bean figured that 20 of them are "safe" for the party that holds them now.

Safe Seats

Among the "safe" seats he listed:

For the Democrats—Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Utah and two in North Carolina.

For the Republicans—Kansas, New Hampshire, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oregon and Vermont.

He figured the 16 others as follows:

Colorado—"Democratic Representative John A. Carroll has a better than even chance to replace Republican Senator Eugene D. Millikin."

Connecticut—"A reasonably certain sweep for the GOP over Democratic Senators McMahon and Benton and Gov. Chester Bowles."

Idaho—"Republicans will retain their present seat, held by Senator Henry C. Dworshak, and have a better than 50-50 chance" at the seat now held by Democratic Senator Glen Taylor.

Illinois—"This one is close but right now it looks as if Democratic Senator Lucas is likely to lose."

Indiana—"Very close. At the moment, it appears that Republican Senator Homer E. Capehart has the edge."

Iowa—"Another tight contest with Republican Senator S. B. Hickenlooper just squeezing through."

Missouri—"GOP Senator Forrest C. Donnell will probably be beaten."

Nevada—"Despite a Democratic tradition, there's been a strong swing to the Republicans in this State. Democratic Senator Pat McCarran will probably lose."

New York—"Reelection of Democratic Senator Herbert H. Lehman."

Ohio—"An extremely close battle, with indications as of now that Democratic Candidate Joseph T. Ferguson will nose out Republican Senator Taft."

Pennsylvania—Democratic Senator Francis J. Meyers appears likely to be in the losing column."

Washington—"Democratic Senator Warren G. Magnuson to win."

Wisconsin—"Republican Senator Alexander Wiley also appears on the winning side."

alifornia—"Is anybody's guess. California's unique cross-filing system bars scientific analysis of the voting records."

Brannan Plan Political, Says Rep. Hope

Representative Hope (R., Kans.) said yesterday that Secretaries of Agriculture for the past 25 years, whether Republican or Democrat, have kept party politics out of farm problems but that "cannot be said for the present Secretary," Charles Brannan.

Hope slapped back at Brannan for accusing him of "grossly misrepresenting" phases of the Administration's proposed new farm program, popularly called the Brannan plan.

Hope, the senior Republican on the House Agriculture Committee, said he and other committee members are eager to cooperate with Brannan in the solution of farm problems.

"But there cannot be this cooperation unless Secretary Brannan is willing to treat agriculture and agricultural legislation as his predecessors have done—as an economic and not a political problem," Hope said in a statement.

Union Won't Unload Crab Meat From USSR

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Longshoremen today refused to unload a $250,000 shipment of crab meat because it came from Russia.

Frank Kerins, shop steward of Local 791, AFL International Longshoremen's Association, told reporters:

"Why help Russia make money in this country? Most of the men here are veterans. We'll be fighting Russia soon."

British spokesmen said any money from the sale of the crab meat would go to England and not to Russia. Britain took the crab meat from Russia under a trade agreement.

Walsh Plans Return Today For Mail Bill

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 14 (AP).—Representative John Walsh (D. Ind.) tonight said that "God willing, I will be on the floor in Washington at noon tomorrow" to call up a controversial bill to restore twice-a-day home mail delivery.

The object of a three-State police alarm, Walsh was located by the Associated Press at his hotel here, where he is to appear on a radio program Tuesday night.

"I also will be in Green Bay tomorrow night to appear on the program," Walsh said.

The police alarm went out because backers of the bill were anxious to know of his whereabouts and whether he could make it back to Washington in time to call up the bill.

If he doesn't, the bill will be tossed aside.

Yesterday's situation developed this way:

Walsh and others recently got up a petition to force the bill to the House floor. It was then in a Rules Committee pigeonhole. When a majority signed the petition, this required the House to act on a resolution allowing the bill to be considered. Members adopted it yesterday.

The catch was this: The resolution specified that Walsh shall be recognized to call up the bill—today.

If he isn't here, House experts said, the whole cumbersome procedure will have to be repeated.

Compromise In Oil Fight Seems Doomed

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

An effort by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), to effect an interim compromise in the tidelands oil dispute yesterday appeared headed for failure.

The Senate Interior Committee, which O'Mahoney heads, met to consider the Senator's proposal to give the Interior Department control over well drilling in the tidelands pending final settlement of the long-drawn-out dispute over their ownership.

The Supreme Court, in three decisions, had said that the Federal Government, not the states, has the paramount interest in the oil-rich off-shore areas. But state officials, led by Texas, California and Louisiana, losers in the three cases, have turned to Congress to overturn the court decisions.

At yesterday's hearing, Senator Long (D., La.), suggested the bill be rewritten to provide for state operation of the tidelands until a final solution is reached. Since Congress is overwhelmingly on the states's side thus far, such an amendment would amount to giving the states everything but actual title to the oil-bearing underwater areas.

But Interior Department Solicitor Mason G. White said his department would object to any such change because of the Supreme Court decisions.

Texas Attorney General Price Daniel, also a witness, was on the same side as Long. Daniel has been a leader in the states' demand for control.

The third parties to the dispute, the oil companies now drilling in the tidelands under state leases now of questionable legality, also were represented at yesterday's hearing.

Rex G. Baker, representing Humble Oil & Refining Co. (a Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey subsidiary), suggested the O'Mahoney bill be amended "by square-cut ratification of state leases." He said national security requires

Jail for 11 Reds Demanded

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Government charged today that the 11 convicted Communist leaders are backing Communist forces in Korea and elsewhere, and thus "should not be at large in this hour of national crisis."

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol made public the Government's affidavit in support of its move to have the "American Politburo" members—now free in bail—jailed while their appeals are being considered by the courts.

All have been found guilty of criminal conspiracy and sentenced to prison terms up to five years.

Saypol accompanied his affidavit with photostats of recent articles in the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, assailing the United Nations action in Korea and denouncing "American war-makers."

The Daily Worker propaganda line since the Korean fihting began, the affidavit said, "justifies the conclusion that, with the welfare and security of the United States and its armed forces at stake, appellants' loyalty to the Communist forces in Korea and throughout the world is undivided and unquestioned."

Saypol said the party leaders "are continuing to pursue the same course of conduct which led to their conviction" and "they should not be at large in this hour of national crisis."

One of the Daily Worker exhibits Saypol made public was a full-page article signed by three of the convicted leaders. It said in part: "Not a cent, not a gun, not a plane for Wall Street's puppet regime in Korea, Formosa, Viet Nam."

The defendants must show cause in Federal court here next Thursday why they should not go to jail at once.

Judge Gives Fresh Air Lover What He Wants

Clarence White, 60, no fixed address, is going to get fresh air the hard way.

Pleading guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to stealing two quarts of milk and two pints of cream, White said he would rather go to Occoquan Workhouse, where he would get "sunshine and fresh air" than to the more confining District Jail.

Judge Neilson sentenced White to pay a $25 fine or serve 30 days.

ENRICHED WHITE BREAD
HERE'S WHY WE DATE SKYLARK:
It's your proof, your guarantee that your loaf of Skylark was freshly baked for today. Most other brands do not carry this proof. Always buy Skylark, in the red and white, candy-striped wrapper. You always know that Skylark is first-day fresh!
Each day's sale of Skylark is carefully estimated in advance. Then, Skylark's expert bakers mix all the fine ingredients, then pop the baking pans into the oven.
Finally, as each toasty-brown loaf comes out, it is wax wrapped and sealed with a special end seal.
This end seal carries the day, Monday, or Tuesday, and so on. Then the loaves are rushed to your Safeway Store, just in time for sale. If there should be any unsold dated bread at the end of the day, it is removed—never again sold as fresh bread. No guesswork with Skylark—you know it's first-day fresh!
Skylark BREAD
DATED FRESH EVERY DAY!
Guaranteed
YOUR MONEY BACK IF SKYLARK ISN'T THE FINEST BREAD YOU'VE EVER EATEN!
Not only do we guarantee that SKYLARK is fresh every day, but we guarantee you can't buy a better bread. If, for any reason, you are not satisfied with SKYLARK bread, we ask you to drop into any Safeway store and your money will be refunded immediately and without question.

CHEERY NEWS about CHERRIES
From SAFEWAY
Just the mention of cherry pie or cherry roly-poly seems to add a cheery note to the humdrum task of planning summer menus that are just a little different and exciting. Your reputation as a culinary expert will soar to new heights when you serve your family a luscious mouth-watering cherry roly-poly or a big thick juicy cherry pie. Safeway has priced the cherries and the rest of the fixings to save you money no matter how you serve 'em. So for a treat that's different and thrifty, serve canned pitted cherries this week and next. Barbara Holmes of the Washington Times-Herald recommends the cherry roly-poly recipe below. Try it today!
CHERRY-ROLY-POLY
2 Cups Fleet Mix or Bisquick
6 tbls. softened butter
4 cups pitted sour cherries
¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
Cream
¾ tsp. cinnamon
1¾ cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
2 tbls. lemon juice
2 tsp. grated lemon rind
Prepare biscuit dough, following directions printed on Fleet Mix or Bisquick box. Roll into a rectangle 12 inches by 8 inches. Spread with 1 tablespoon of the butter. Then cover to within ½ inch of the edge with the sour cherries which have been pitted. Sprinkle with a mixture of the brown sugar and cinnamon, and roll up like a jelly roll. Then cut the roll into 1-1½ inch crosswise slices.
Meanwhile boil the granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons of the butter, the water, lemon juice and rind together for 10 minutes. Pour this syrup into a shallow baking dish 10"x6"x2", and place the rolls, cut side down, in the syrup. Spread them with the remaining butter. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 30 minutes. Serve warm with some syrup from the pan poured over each roll. Top with whipped cream or serve with plain cream. Serves 9.

Los Angeles Rent Decontrol Held Up

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (U.P.)—Placard-carrying landlords demonstrated outside the City Council chambers today while Federal Housing Expediter Tighe Woods unsuccessfully pleaded that the city reverse its action in voting away rent controls.

"Tighe Woods, Go Home," one of the placards said.

"Tighe Woods, Who is the Law, You or Congress?" another asked.

The Housing Expediter proposed to the Council that it adopt an alternative plan to outright decontrol, as Chicago did two weeks ago.

After hearing Woods, the Council voted 10 to 5 to sustain its July 28 action in voting decontrol.

A few hours later, however, Federal District Judge James Kirkwood in Washington, D. C., issued a temporary 10-day restraining order against decontrol of Los Angeles rents, on petition of the International Association of Machinists at the request of the Los Angeles Tenants Council.

Woods had explained to the Council he was forced to sign the decontrol order and would do so upon his return to Washington Thursday unless the alternative plan was adopted.

Under the Chicago plan, neighborhood rent control officers are empowered to grant rent increases within three days without landlords' having to go to a central office to present their cases.

"It is very ill-considered that you come here and suggest that the 10 Councilmen who voted for decontrol did not have a full realization of what they were doing," Councilman George P. Cronk told the Federal official.

The demonstration outside the Council chambers was organized by the Small Property Owners League, whose president, G. G. Bauman, called Woods "a carpet-bagging bureaucrat."

The Council chamber was jammed to capacity with 500 spectators, while more than 300 others demonstrated outside the chamber waving placards and booing.

Experts Meet To Revise Junior College

A pattern for junior college development in Maryland may be set by a conference of four nationally known consultants at Montgomery Junior College, Takoma Park, Md., Thursday and Friday.

The consultants will work with members of the Maryland State Department of Education, the Montgomery County Board of Education and the staff of the college in revising the institution's plans and program.

According to Dean Hugh G. Price, the experts who will join in the conference are President Alvin C. Eurich of the State University of New York, Albany; Dr. Lawrence L. Bethel, director of the New Haven YMCA Junior College, which operates on the campus of Yale University; Dr. Dwayne Ortoner, director of education of International Business Machines, New City,, and formerly president of Stockton Junior College, Stockton, Calif., and Dr. Henry W. Littlefield, vice president of the Junior College of Connecticut, Bridgeport, who is chairman of the committee on curriculum of the American Association of Junior Colleges.

The conference is sponsored by Dr. Thomas W. Pullen, jr., superintendent of schools for Maryland, who has declared the conference may result in a pattern for all Maryland junior colleges.

The Junior College now has taken physical possession of the Bliss Electrical School in Takoma Park and remodeling has begun. The electrical school will be continued as a part of the cirriculum of the Junior College and possibly may be perpetuated by being named the Bliss Electrical School of the Montgomery Junior College. The entire plant and equipment was sold to the county by president Louis D. Bliss for $350,000.

The one-year course now given by Bliss will be continued with a certificate award and a two-year course which will combine electronics and academic work for an associate in arts degree will be added.

2 Physicians Pay Visit to Elizabeth

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth, expecting her second child soon, was visited tonight by her two attending physicians.

The doctors, Sir William Gilliat and Sir John Weir, left Clarence House after a short stay.

The 24-year-old Princess, first in line to the British throne, played with her first child, 21-month-old Prince Charles, for a few minutes on the Clarence House lawn this afternoon.

Her husband, Prince Philip, apparently trying to calm jumpy nerves, attended the cricket match between England and the West Indies.

Crowds outside Clarence House, which had numbered hundreds during the day, dwindled to a handful at dusk.

Sabotage Delays Trials Of New British Carrier

Portsmouth, England, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Sabotage halted trial runs today of the 17,720-ton aircraft carrier Theseus as it prepared to leave Friday for action in Korean waters, an admiralty sourse said.

A spokesman said wires in the master compass were slased and other wires were improperly connected.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Financial Difficulties Force Closing of Chevy Chase Jr. College

Closing of the 47-year-old Chevy Chase Junior College has been ordered by the Board of Trustess.

President Frances R. Brown yesterday announced the decision not to reopen the fashionable girls' school in the fall. She said the board voted "with reluctance and regret" but felt it was necessary because of low enrollment, rising costs and the uncertainty of the international situation.

No plans have been made for disposition of the 11½ acre campus and the buildings, located about a mile north of the District Line on Connecticut ave. The school has been a non-profit institution for the last ten years.

The school graduated 45 students last June. The enrollment last year was 100 but Miss Brown declined to give the prospective enrollment for the coming year.

Miss Brown was made president in 1947 after serving as dean from 1944. The school had a two year course Vice President Alben W. Barkley presented the diplomas at commencement exercises last June.

Members of the board of trustees besides Miss Brown include: Paul Banfield headmaster of the Landon School for Boys; Bethesda; G. C. Bowie, Rockville; Mrs. Wesley E. Buchanan, Bethesda, Md.; State Senator Roy Tasco Davis, formerly head of the National Park Seminary, Forest Glen; Clyde D. Garrett, 3300 Rittenhouse st. nw.; Tracy Scudder, 6410 Connecticut ave. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt of the Shoreham Hotel.

Manpower Hearings To Begin September 5

Chairman James E. Murray (D., Mont.), yesterday announced that his Senate Labor subcommittee will begin public hearings September 5 on plans for mobilizing the Nation's manpower in the Korean war crisis.

Problems to be studied include settlement of strikes in defense industries, the possible use of wage ceilings to stabilize the home-front economy, and methods of channeling civilian workers into essential industries.

Enemy Makes New Naktong Crossing liberation from Japanese rule and the second anniversary of the South Korean Republic.

Probings in Force Continue

But probings in force continued and a new Red offensive appeared to be building up in the extreme south.

MacArthur's intelligence spokesman said American air power apparently was keeping the North Koreans from assembling the necessary armor for the big push.

He reported two mechanized battalions, including some of the Communists' best trained troops, were hurrying south apparently to link up with the sixth division which was badly mauled by the first big American counterattack in the Chinju sector. Remnants of the sixth appeared to be regrouping for a counterattack of their own.

The picture around the front, reading from south to north then east, shaped up like this:

Chinju sector—Americans consolidated their positions on high ground about four miles east of Chinju. Other infantrymen were cleaning out pockets of an estimated 1000 Reds trapped in the rear. A possible Red counter-offensive here would prevent shifting American forces north to meet the big Red drive on Taegu.

Changyong sector—The U. S. Twenty-fourth Division moved forward slowly Tuesday in a major counterattack after beating down tank-led Red counter assaults during the night. The bridgehead held by the North Korean Fourth Division was being steadily trimmed down, but the Reds continued to push across new reinforcements.

Tuksong sector—First Cavalry Division and Allied war planes smashed at a new crossing by more than 1000 Reds Tuesday. American headquarters said a similar number were killed Monday.

Taejon sector—Various armored units, including two tank regiments, were spotted among six divisions massed for a major assault through Weagwan toward Taeju, 12 air miles to the southeast.

Opyong sector—A tank-supported Communist regiment attacked the South Korean First Division Monday night five miles north of Waegwan. MacArthur's summary reported the South Koreans were "containing" this attack.

Northern Front—South Korean sixth and eigth divisions withdrew "to prepared positions" and established contact with each other. An Eigth army communique indicated these were minor adjustments.

Eastern Front—Unidentified U. S. troops pushed to within half a mile west of Pohang, Communist-held port and former American base. South Korean forces drove on the city from the south. American troops held abandoned Pohang air base. The South Korean capital division, driving from the north, recaptured Iman, 17 miles northwest of Pohang. Loss of Iman had not previously been reported.

Sea—A U. S. cruiser shelled the North Korean east coast in a raiding expedition that carried to within 100 miles of Soviet Russian territory. It was probably the northernmost strike of American warships.

Air—Two American planes were lost as allied aircraft flew more than 400 sorties Monday. "Numerous casualties" were inflicted on the enemy and eight Red tanks were reported destroyed in heavy ground support strikes.

Main action centered on the western front. The drive by the 24th in the Changnyong area was intended to knock out the most threatening Communist bridgehead and throw the prospective Red offensive off balance. Fierce Red counterassaults were intended to check the 24th's attack.

The Americans plunged forward in a northwesterly direction with a drive aimed at wiping out the bridgehead by either killing the enemy or chasing him back to the Naktong's west banks.

The action came on the fifth anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japan, a date that had been heralded as the probable start of the Reds' greatest offensive of the war.

Behind 45-ton Pershing tanks, troops of the U. S. 24th Infantry Division had stormed more than a mile into the Communist bridgehead east of the Naktong near Changnyong. The bloody frontal assault was calculated to throw the enemy across the river at that point and spoil his offensive before it began.

The Americans slowed down in the dawn of this Korean "Liberation Day," but a field staff officer predicted they soon would "move ahead okay from here."

The initial success of this American punch brought a mood of cautious optimism to division headquarters.

New Red Drive Imminent

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DEFENDERS STAND GROUND—As Reds continued to build up strength on the central front (sawtooth) for expected big push on Taegu (broken arrows), Yank and South Korean units held firm on all fronts. At Pohang a full division of South Koreans moved 25 miles from the northern front to bolster other units seeking to drive the foe back and make the airstrip there again usable for American planes. On the Chinju front, to the south, Yanks continued to consolidate their positions

Pravda Sees U. S. 'Aggression'

Moscow, Aug. 14 (AP).—Pravda charged today that the United States is preparing a new "aggression" in the Far East.

The Communist Party newspaper said that was the purpose of the visit of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa and of W. Averell Harriman, President Truman's foreign affairs adviser, to MacArthur in Tokyo.

"United States aggression against Korea is just one constituent part of a criminal plot," declared the newspaper.

Pravda said the assumption of the chairmanship of the U. N. Security Council by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik had put an end to the "shameless and arbitrary" practice of the United States of picturing its "dictation as a dicision" of the U. N.

Pravda said "American bosses, everywhere igniting the war psychosis in connection with the aggression of the United States in Korea," were demanding that Atlantic Pact members "throw onto the popular masses new heavy burdens of war expenditures."

Pravda said increased arms expenditures proposed by the Danish government in particular were a "direct consequence of the participation of Denmark in the aggressive North Atlantic bloc."

House May Move To Committee Room Sept. 1

The House will move out of its chambers September 1 so that workmen can complete the remodeling project they started last year, Speaker Sam Rayburn said yesterday.

He added that the House will meet in the Ways and Means Committee Room in the new House Office building if there is still business to conduct after September.

The Senate already has vacated its quarters and met yesterday in the old Supreme Court chamber. In both chambers, new seats and new wall tapestries are to be put in to complete a remodeling job begun last year.

Yanks Repel 2 Flank Attacks, Renew Own Drive in 'Bulge'

By Robert Bennyhoff

With the United States Army in the Naktong Bulge (Tuesday), Aug. 15 (U.P.)—American infantry attacked at dawn today against Communists dug in on high ridges after a night of fierce fighting in which the Reds tried to break out of the contracted Changnyong bulge at two points.

The North Koreans, supported by tanks and self-propelled guns, made their heaviest attack at the southern end of the bulge.

At the northern end, Communist infantry made a concentrated attack down a narrow valley.

The Americans held firm and gave little ground during the night.

Americans Renew Attack

At dawn, supported by artillery and planes, they jumped off in a renewal of yesterday's attack to destroy the Communist Fourth Division pinned in the Changnyong pocket some 30 miles south of Taegu.

Yesterday the Doughboys sloshed through rain and mud under ceaseless heavy artillery fire to punch as much as 2000 yards into the Communists' half-moon-shaped bridgehead across the Naktong.

The Americans are trying to close a nutcracker on the bulge, and it is a tough nut to crack.

At dusk they had gone roughly halfway along the ground they must cover to push the invading Reds back across the river in this sector, one of the most vital on the whole Allied front.

At any other time, the GIs might have complained in soldier fashion against the rain and the mud. Today they were happy because with the rain came cooler weather.

Commander Pleased

"It's the most successful day's fighting we've had," the officer commanding the drive said.

The commanding officer was pleased with the cool weather and with the 200-yard gain for Monday. But he was especially pleased because the gain gave his 24th Infantry Division troops high ground from which the North Koreans had made things unpleasant for them for nine days.

The commander also was pleased because, for the first time, the number of American troops may possibly equal the number of the enemy opposite them.

Enemy resistance to the American drive was stiff all day Monday. It got stiffer during the afternoon because the strongest enemy force is now entrenched behind a two-mile-long ridge that starts back of the right flank and extends to about the middle of the battleground.

It is evident that the North Koreans mean to fight to keep the bulge, and with it their threat to the Taegu-Pusan supply line 17 miles to the east.

They have their whole Fourth Division in the bulge, three to four regiments, including an artillery regiment. They have 120-mm. mortars, captured American 105-mm. and 155-mm. guns, and also for the first time on this front a powerful 150-mm. howitzer, which they are firing from the other side of the river.

Month's Total Of B-29 Bombs Is 7000 Tons

Tokyo, (Tuesday) Aug. 15 (U.P.)—B-29 Superfortresses in their first month of operations against the North Korean Communists ending August 12 dropped more than 7000 tons of bombs, mainly on five major targets, Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer announced today.

The five major strategic targets included the Seoul and Pyongyang railroad marshaling yards, which have been listed as "virtually all destroyed," Stratemeyer said in a report on operations of the Far East Air Force Bomber Command, which he heads.

In addition to the Seoul and Pyongyang rail yards, the Superforts concentrated on the Wonsan marshaling yards and oil refinery, the Hungam (Konan) chemical and munitions complex, and the Rashin only 17 miles from the Soviet boronl y17 miles from the Soviet border.

These targets rceived 3733 tons of bombs from the Superforts, Stratemeyer said.

In their month of operations the B-29's have flown more than 1000 sorties with a loss of two planes—one shot down by Yak fighters and the other abandoned over the Sea of Japan.

The Royal Australian Air Force called Monday one of its most satisfactory days as the Aussie planes flew ground support missions less than 200 yards ahead of Allied troops.

One Australian flight leader told how his planes, flying in peasoup fog, burst into the open at 500 feet and were able to see the faces of the enemy troops they were attacking. He said the North Koreans tried to use trench mortars as antiaircraft weapons, but without effect.

A United States Air Force spokesman said that despite the bad weather Monday, Fifth Air Force fighters and bombers knocked out seven Communist tanks and damaged 10 others up to 3 p. m.

Hearing to Open Today

Efforts failed yesterday to settle without hearing an unfair practice complaint filed by soft coal operators against John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers during last winter's strikes.

Accordingly, a trial examiner will open hearings today for the National Labor Relations Board.

Railroad Unions Agree to Continue White House Talks

By The Associated Press

Union officials threatening a possible nationwide railroad strike of trainmen and conductors said last night they had reluctantly agreed to continue White House peace conferences.

President W. P. Kennedy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and President R. O. Hughes of the Order of Railway Conductors said they would meet again today with John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman, at 2 p. m.

The two union leaders had gone to the White House tonight intending to ask President Truman again to seize the railroads to prevent a strike.

Kennedy said, however, that they resumed talks with Steelman and did not see Mr. Truman, or formally ask for seizure. The unions had requested seizure on August 4. Kennedy said that if the talks with Steelman become bogged down, the unions will then again ask seizure.

How mild can a cigarette be? SMOKE CAMELS AND SEE!

More People Smoke Camels than any other cigarette!

OPERA STAR MAKES OWN TEST

MARGUERITE PIAZZA, dark-eyed beauty of the opera, joins many of her admirers in echoing the praises of Camel mildness. Says Miss Piazza, "Of all the tests, the Camel 30-Day Mildness Test convinced me! Camels agree with my throat and they taste grand."

Smokers Prove Camel Mildness for Themselves—Make 30-Day Test in Their Own "T-Zones"!

(T for Throat, T for Taste)

EVERY DAY, more and more smokers are discovering for themselves just how mild a cigarette can be! They're making their own Camel 30-Day Mildness Tests—smoking Camels regularly for 30 days.

This is the sensible test. It does not rely on tricks or short cuts. No snap judgments based on one puff or one sniff. Instead, you, the smoker, test Camels on a regular, pack-after-pack, day-after-day basis. You judge Camel mildness and the flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos in your own "T-Zone"—the best possible proving ground for a cigarette. See if the Camel 30-Day Test doesn't give you the most enjoyment you've ever had from smoking.

Redbird Hurler Gets the Pitch

HOWARD POLLET, veteran southpaw pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinals, had this to say about Camel mildness: "The throat specialists' findings in the 30-Day Test don't surprise me. I've smoked Camels for many years. I know they're mild. Camels don't tire my taste and they're just right for my throat!"

Cross Section, U.S.A.

"I DIDN'T KNOW how mild a cigarette could be until I changed to Camels!" Jeanne Wilson, swimmer.

"CHALK ME UP as another Camel fan. Camel's rich, full flavor always hits the spot!" Jack Trahan, commercial diver.

"I HAVE KNOWN about Camel mildness all along. Camels stand the test of steady smoking!" Eileen Seigh, ice skater.

"NOW I KNOW how mild a cigarette can be! My 30-Day Test won me to Camels!" Lawyer Harry Southwell, Junior.

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT ON 30-DAY TEST OF CAMEL SMOKERS:

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels

Hundreds of men and women were in this coast-to-coast test. For 30 days, they smoked Camels—and only Camels. Each week, noted throat specialists examined their throats—2,470 examinations in all—with the above findings!

Make your own 30-Day Camel MILDNESS Test ...in your "T-Zone"

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS

than any other cigarette

This fact was disclosed in a nationwide survey, made of doctors in every branch of medicine and in every State in the Union. 113,597 doctors were asked this question . . . "What cigarette do you smoke, Doctor?" The brand named most was Camel!

Unni Nayar

Newspapermen in Washington who knew Col. Unni Nayar will feel a keen sense of personal loss in his death as a United Nations observer in Korea. In happier times Colonel Nayar was the public relations officer of the Indian Embassy in Washington, and a highly successful one he was—full of initiative, reliable, well informed and thoroughly equipped with a broad view of the relations between his country and the United States. Not least among his qualities was an engaging gentleness. He had served as deputy Indian delegate on the U. N. Korean Commission, and was one of the first to understand the real meaning of the war in Korea. It was characteristic of him to volunteer for front-line observer duty. His untimely death from a land mine, along with two British correspondents, will be deplored by his many friends, and we extend our condolences to his family and the Indian Embassy and the United Nations.

Edging Into Censorship

How can we protect our security without jeopardizing our information? The Defense Department has asked its officials not to disclose news of ship movements from Eastern and Western coast ports even after departure. It had previously asked them not to divulge this information in advance of sailings. The first order was clearly a plain prerogative of the military. If the second order is to have any effect, it requires newspapers not to print something for which the department is not the sole source, and thus involves domestic censorship of a kind. Ship departures, after all, can be seen at any port. Newspapers, no doubt, will comply cheerfully. They may rightly observe, however, that their compliance will withhold from the American people information that will be available to people everywhere else, until and unless outgoing communications are subjected to censorship.

As to this, General MacArthur's headquarters asks that censorship applied in the Korean war zone be imposed in the United States. Security in the war zone always has been the responsibility of the military commander. This is an elementary principle of command responsibility. Security and censorship in the United States, however, have never been a purely military responsibility, and it is to be hoped that they never will be. During World War II, this country had a voluntary domestic censorship that came close to perfection in reconciling the conflicting requirements of security and information. Mr. Byron Price and his assistants in the office of censorship frequently found it necessary to override, in the interests of information, decisions that the military sought to impose out of the necessities of security. It is a first principle of censorship in a democracy that civilian authority must be in control. Nothing we have learned about General MacArthur's handling of security problems in Korea will recommend him as the author of a system of domestic censorship.

This Korean war may be the start of a generation-long contest. Restraints and impediments and influences upon the free flow of information to which we now submit may be with us the rest of our lifetime. It is doubly important, therefore, that the American people consent to no censorship that does not rest upon the sound principles by which World War II censorship was conducted.

Bogota Charter

If the Rio treaty is the skeleton of defense of the Western Hemisphere, the Bogota Charter is what puts flesh on the bare bones. This charter, framed at the Bogota Conference more than two years ago, gives legal sanction to the Organization of American States as the hemisphere security organization. It is encouraging to have the Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously recommend Senate approval of the charter, albeit with a reservation preserving national freedom of action in economic, social and educational matters. The wording of the portions of the charter dealing with human rights, which presumably aroused senatorial suspicions, is for the most part innocuous, but it is far better to have ratification with the reservation than not to have it at all.

We hope that the Senate will promptly follow the lead of its committee, and that the United States action will set an example for the other nations which have lagged in ratification. It is something of a shock to realize that the OAS is still operating in quasi-provisional fashion. The Rio treaty itself took life in December, 1948, but four nations—Bolivia, Ecuador, Guatemala and Peru—still have not formally approved it. With respect to the Bogota Charter only eight nations—Brazil, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua and Paraguay—have ratified it. There is no reason to believe that the delay is caused by anything but inertia. Nonetheless, it is time for the remaining signatories of the charter to give tangible recognition of their faith in an organization which, in the case of the Caribbean dispute, has already proved invaluable in the peaceful settlement of differences.

Whose Civil Defense?

Since Washington has been chosen as one of three test cities for civil defense planning, it is essential that the program get into high gear promptly. Engineer Commissioner Young has warned that the $290,000 earmarked by Congress may be inadequate for stockpiling supplies and for an air-raid warning system. That may well be, and Washington is in a peculiar position because it must depend upon the Federal Government for its budget. Nonetheless, the first job is organization, and here the item of transcendental importance is to enlist a man of first-class ability as civil defense director.

On a national scale organization is likewise of first importance. Community civil defense planning is more or less inchoate, awaiting the forthcoming report of the National Security Resources Board, although some States and localities, notably New York, have taken matters into their own hands. Shifts, delays and confusion in Federal planning have been unpardonable, and cities clamoring for guidance have understandably been disheartened.

At the Federal level the anomaly now is that civil defense under the NSRB is a purely planning and advisory function. Whatever the part of individual communities, it is apparent that there must be some permanent national civil defense organization with power of decision, for there are some things that only such an organization can do. The determination of uniform standards, the division of functions between Federal and local governments, the provision of aid funds, the unsnarling of conflicting State regulations—these must be done at the Federal level, and legislation probably will be necessary. Possibly the new NSRB study will have something to say on these points.

There is, however, ground for the feeling that some States and cities are leaning too heavily on the Federal Government. Civil defense is first of all a local problem and responsibility which no one else can meet. Some items of community planning are obvious. Localities know, for example, that they will need comprehensive plans for emergency fire and police protection, for water and other utility services; that they will need hospital facilities to take care of their own casualties plus those from other cities; that they will need large supplies of bandages; that they will need doctors trained in radiological medicine. They also know that they will need money, a large part of which, at least, must come from their own coffers. Most of all, they will need information which can be drilled into the individual citizen.

In this connection an adaptation of the new joint publication of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department, The Effects of Atomic Weapons, has great potential usefulness. This tells—in somewhat technical terms, to be sure—just what the individual can do to protect himself, such as dropping to the floor, with back to the window, and awaiting the shock wave.

Elaborate plans for dispersal of cities and industry, which have been mentioned from time to time, have some merit as long-range guides. But they are at best futuristic and costly, and they hold little comfort for the citizen who wants to know what to do if attack should come now. The British, who have had much experience with air attack, have based their civil defense program on three simple factors: a warning system, adequate shelters, adequate information. The last point may well be the most important, for panic could be an even more devastating force than atomic attack itself. There is no reason why the new manual cannot be simplified and put out in understandable language so that every citizen may have a copy. We have faith that there is no eventuality that Americans cannot face up to if they know within broad limits what to expect.

Why Senators?

Political analysts have not yet produced, or at least announced, any reasonable explanation of why incumbent Senators have added heavily to the mortality statistics in their campaigns for renomination, while incumbent members of the House of Representatives have emerged from their primaries in relatively good political health.

The defeat of U. S. Senator Glen H. Taylor in the Idaho primary the other day established a mortality rate for incumbent Senators of 33 1/3 percent. Taylor was the seventh Senator to be defeated, out of the 21 who have participated in primaries between April 11 and the present time. Of those defeated six were Democrats and one was Republican. Of members of the House of Representatives who stood for renomination only four were defeated, out of a total of nearly 220, for a mortality percentage of a tiny fraction of 1 percent. The defeated four came from districts very close together in the mountain section of Tennessee and South Carolina and two were Democrats and two Republicans. In most of these primaries the winners were experienced former Congressmen, one being Carroll Reece, the former Republican national chairman.

Partisans of members of the House of Representatives have insisted, but not too loudly, that a leading factor in the defeat of so many Senators was that their opponents in most cases were experienced campaigners, case-hardened and tempered by long experience in the House of Representatives, which is more rough and tumble than the Senate. Be this as it may, it is a well-established political belief that primaries generally reflect no trend in a national sense, though the mortality of Senators in seven primaries is already creating wonderment on Capitol Hill. Nine Senators who mus run the hurdles in the remaining State pri maries in September are reportedly much more amenable to the advice of colleagues than they were several months ago.

Republican Needle

There will be some difference of opinion on the scrutiny of the foreign policy of the last five years which is offered by the Republican minority of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. How the past looks to us will be given in another editorial. Here we concern ourselves with the Republican recommendations. They require the Administration "to regain the initiative," but suggest nothing specific as a means of attaining it. Why not demand the denunciation of the agreement at Yalta which they criticize for reasons both good and bad? Such a step would lay before the world the treaty violations of which the Soviet is guilty, and to that extent might have great propaganda value in Asia, particularly China.

"Once we regain the initiative," says the document, "we can then redouble our efforts through the United Nations

1. To establish a reliable program of international inspection and control of atomic activities;
2. To halt lawless aggression of the strong over the weak and the slavery which communism inflicts upon its victims; and
3. To pursue every effective means to give greater strength to the United Nations as a powerful force able to prevent aggression in the world . . . including the submission of the Vandenberg Resolution to the General Assembly."

The Republicans, again, need to spell out what they mean. Certainly there is nothing concrete in the first item about atomic energy. It ought to be addressed to Stalin. As to the second and the third items, these appear to be interrelated, and seem to rest solely upon action under the Vandenberg Resolution of 1948. This resolution was an admirable effort to supply the United Nations with sinews. Some of the Vandenberg suggestions already have been carried out, notably the strengthening of regional arrangements. Among the major items on which no action has been taken is the limitation of the veto power.

However, there is no need at present to waste time in trying to amend the Charter of the United Nations so as to put teeth and viability into the world organization. Events have done that job—in U. N. action in Korea. A police force is now in being, and all that needs to be done on the diplomatic front is to press at Lake Success for the formal establishment of a U. N. Police Authority. It would have been very helpful if the Republicans had urged the Administration to take this course instead of talking in generalities and in terms of 1948.

State Capitals

The Census Bureau has found it necessary to issue a special report on the standing in the 1950 census of the capitals of the States of the United States. It says that Boston has the largest population of any of the 48 State capitals ("just 3682 below the population of the Nation's Capital"). It says that immediately behind Boston as largest State capitals came Indianapolis, Denver, Columbus and Atlanta, in that order. It says that Carson City, Nev., was smallest with a population of 3069.

It used to be that State capitals were placed where they now are for the purpose of attracting the least population possible, on the theory that large populations harbor a profusion of pressure groups. The founding fathers in every State scrambled for business in their native cities but they did not want to be caught in a crossfire of rival ambitions between cities, hence they chose to put their capitals in placid meadows where no advantage of location or juxtaposition could permit a weighting of the scales of justice and law. To the founders Carson City would be the capital to be envied, but the Bureau of the Census, with its citation of Boston, seems to be catering to the modern craze for bigness.

Setting An Example

Employes of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey entering the armed services have been guaranteed their old jobs, or as nearly an equivalent position as possible, when they return home. The company has also promised to pay their dependents the difference between the breadwinner's regular pay and his service pay, up to a maximum of half the former. In addition, service credits under employe benefit programs will be continued. And, regardless of whether an employe has dependents or not, he will receive a lump sum payment equal to two months' wages or salary if he enlists or is drafted.

Only a comparatively few large and financially strong companies are in a position to make such generous provision for their employes, but a good many can afford to make substantial contributions to protect dependents of lower income employes from financial hardship. Money so spent is a sound investment for a company as well as for the Government, since it creates good employer-employe relationships and improves the morale of the men in uniform.

RAIN

We are swimming in an ocean of water; the sky and the tops of the elms float slowly like sea-weeds up through the large cool waves.
And fins of metal and feathers strike up and out of the expanse as if they would throw themselves from this ocean, break clear of its waves and reach untouched, perfect space.

Korean Land Reform

Since the invasion of South Korea there has been a noticeable propaganda campaign which has tried to infiltrate the minds of the American public. It tells us that we are backing a reactionary regime which, among other things, has not given the people land reform.

Mr. Dulles' recent article in the New York Times shows how false this whole line is. In regard to land reform, in particular, I should like to point out that even before the American troops left Korea in 1948, land reform was begun on a limited scale. At that time 15 percent of the farming land—the best rice land—was distributed to the tenants. This was property that had formerly been owned by Japanese. (On June 1 of this year the Republic of Korea set in motion its own land reform program, and plans scheduled for this summer would have raised the owners to 90 percent from 30 percent in 1945). The republic's own land reform law had been established through due democratic procedure, and this meant getting the bill through an assembly made up to a large extent of landlords.

The line of thinking which would induce us to believe that the South Koreans would welcome the Northerners because of "reforms" the Communists would institute is exactly the opposite of the fact. To date, in the part of the South overrun by the Communists the price of rice has skyrocketed; food, in fact, is impossible to buy; terrible atrocities have been committed; free reign is given to looting as witnessed by Communist radio reports themselves which tell every day that "many trophies were seized," and mere children—boys and girls—are being conscripted.

"Limiting Taxis"

In regard to your August 10 editorial concerning the limitation of taxicab licenses I feel that they should be limited, and that the assigning or transfering of licenses should not be permitted, but the abolishing of part-time driving would hardly solve the problem, as most part-time drivers work when they are most needed, that is during the rush hours. A large percentage of these drivers take people to and from work, so that to abolish part-time drivers would not especially help the full-time drivers, but would make the task of getting a cab during rush hours more difficult.

I, as a part-time driver living near the District line, have picked up many passengers in that area and have taken them to doctors, to hospitals and elsewhere, passengers who otherwise would have had to wait a long time for a cab or wouldn't have been able to get one at all.

The fact that many drivers have to work 12 hours a day to make a living helps prove the fact that there are too many full-time drivers, and helps prove that there should be no such thing as a full-time cab driver except for those few who might be too physically handicapped to engage in a more advantageous occupation. It is not in the best interests of good health to sit in an automobile for eight or more hours every day.

RAY C. THOMPSON, JR.
Washington.

The abolition of part-time driving appears to violate the principles of free enterprise in a greater degree than simply limiting the number of taxicabs.

Your editorial also failed to take into consideration the needs and welfare of the part-time cab driver, and his reasons for working many hours more than the average employed individual.

It is suggested that you review all the facts, with the idea in mind of remedying an admittedly critical situation in a manner not tending to discriminate against a group of sincere hard working citizens.

Falls Church Service

I see a great deal in The Washington Post about the so-called "city" of Falls Church. The "city" has failed and the jobs for friends and relatives will not be forthcoming. The simplest thing is for the "city" of Falls Church to revert to the "Village of Falls Church," in line with the "services" it renders.

We pay gasoline tax for roads. We respectable people neither get in jail nor try to jail others. We pay for water and sewer, trash and can collection. Sidewalks, street lighting and street drainage are mere passing fads which will not last anyway.

Recognizing China

That the Kremlin is masterminding events in Asia goes without serious questioning from any intelligent quarter. A likelihood that seems to have escaped general notice is the master plan to prevent recognition of Communist China by this country. Attest to this many incidents involving indignities and humiliations to which our diplomatic representatives were subjected. The Angus Ward case was one notable example. These incidents were provoked by Russian direction with the hope of precluding any possibility of American recognition of Communist China.

If the United Nations were to seat the Chinese Communist representatives at a time to coincide with provisional recognition by the United States more havoc could be wrought on Moscow's carefully laid plans than could be wrought by dropping an atom bomb into the midst of a top-level Kremlin session.

"Mission To The Vatican"

I have long been an admirer of The Washington Post's fair and reasonable editorial policy, and am therefore all the more surprised to see the contents of your editorial of August 10, "Mission To The Vatican." The whole trend of the editorial is to the effect that your own reasons for approving such a mission are entirely valid and that all views to the contrary are prompted by prejudice. This trend reaches its peak in the closing paragraph in these words: "It is possible, perhaps even probable, that prejudice may even at this stage of affairs be strong enough to block senatorial confirmation of Mr. Truman's plan to nominate a regular diplomatic representative. But this is the sort of prejudice that the country can now ill afford."

There are many of us who do not accept your reasoning at all, and yet feel that our reasons for opposing such a mission are above prejudice. I am inclined to think that there will be individuals on both sides of this question who will not be motivated by prejudice, and I am equally sure that there will be many on both sides who will be. I discovered long ago that no Protestant, however pure his mind and motives may be, can speak disapprovingly of anything remotely related to the Roman Catholic Church without calling down upon his head the charge of being prejudiced. If your editorial is any indication of the line of argument which is to be used by those who approve the mission to the Vatican, the discussion is going to be bitter indeed; and if your early charge of prejudice is intended to discourage any from speaking who may have honest and valid reasons for doing so, I can assure you that such an effort will fail.

Since there is very strong feeling among the American people on both sides of this question, whether motivated by sound logic or prejudice, one wonders if the benefits to be derived from such a mission will outweigh the damage which will be done by bringing up such a divisive matter at this time.

Many of us who will feel bound by conscience to oppose this mission admire the President a great deal, and therefore sincerely trust that nothing we say on this subject will be interpreted as any lack of respect or admiration for him. Certainly we can disagree without becoming disagreeable.

EDWARD H. PRUDEN,
Minister, First Baptist Church.
Washington.

I am in hearty accord with your editorial approving the suggestion of President Truman of establishing regular diplomatic relations with the Vatican, though I am a Protestant.

Geographically the Vatican is a very small state, but the Pope, as its ruler, likely commands the largest numerical following in the world.

Our purpose should be to cultivate friendly relations with all people regardless of race, creed or color; and it is a great mistake for our country to neglect regular diplomatic representation at the Vatican, regardless of the opposition of certain Protestant groups, the result of misguided zeal regarding the separation of church and state.

WADE H. COOPER.
Washington.

The editorial claims, probably correctly, that such recognition would not imply endorsement of Roman Catholic religious tenets. However, the editor entirely misses a much bigger point which is, that it would be an endorsement of the Roman Catholic hierarchy's claim to be a sovereign state.

R. G. GATES.
Washington.

In expressing appreciation of your editorial, "Mission to the Vatican," may I add a thought? Communist Russia is threatening us. She is strong and unscrupulous, and bent to conquer the world. Our countries, our constitutions and all of our freedoms are in jeopardy. The Vatican is our naturally ally—by nature the most powerful and indomitable force in the world against communism. "United we stand" is our only hope. Let not prejudice divide the ranks the President is trying to close.

Defense From Atom Attack

By Marquis Childs

Radar Isn't Enough

HERE is a problem in mathematics that has high-ranking officials in Washington doing a lot of pencil and paper work. It is also a problem in the survival of the United States.

In simplest fashion the outlines of it are as folows. Given each day that passes, Soviet Russia comes closer to having a stockpile of atomic bombs. Everything that is known about Communist Russia leads to the belief that these bombs will be used for the destruction of this country at some point in the next two to four years.

Therefore, the question to be answered is: How can America be made secure from attack. A lot has been heard about the radar fence or warning system now under construction around our continental borders and Alaska.

The word fence gives a false impression. For the troubled mathematicians figure it as follows. After the radar warning system is completed, it should sound an alarm when any group of unidentified planes is about 100 miles distant.

Let's assume that those planes are traveling at 400 miles an hour. If the warning sounds when they are 100 miles out, this means that American defenders have a 15-minute margin. In that 15 minutes the crews must get into the fighter interceptor planes, the motors must be started and warmed up and the fighter interceptors must get up to the altitude where the bombers will come in, which is from 25,000 to 30,000 feet.

IT DOESN'T take any expert on air defenses to see what this means. A certain number of the planes would be shot down. But others would get through and they could be expected to drop their atomic bombs on cities and industrial targets. It's a fairly good guess that one out of six hostile planes might be shot down or one out of four, depending on a great many factors.

In World War II the Germans had a remarkably efficient radar warning system. It could, in many instances, pick up American bombers as they left their bases in England. The Germans also had excellent fighter interceptors. Yet a large number of bombers got through and with plain old-fashioned bombs destroyed large areas of Germany's chief cities.

So that is how the present defense system in process of construction looks. You can go on from there to talk about the number of casualties produced by one atom bomb dropped on a city—anywhere from a half million up.

Then you come to another stage of this problem. The question: Is there any complete defense that is either possible today or theoretically possible in the future? The scientist answers that a virtually airtight defense is theoretically possible. Theoretically, that is to say, just as atomic fission and the atomic bomb were theoretically possible in 1940.

THE NEAR-perfect defense that is scientifically possible is in the discharge, on electronic signal, of rockets on the ground capable of going to any height and seeking out the target at that height. Such rockets fired from installations ringed around cities and vital industrial targets would be a protection.

Experiments toward the development of that kind of rocket are going forward. But they are going forward piecemeal with bits of experimentation farmed out to Army, Navy and Air Force. With the comparatively small sums of money available, a perfected rocket can be expected in X number of years: X being three, four, five, depending on whether the experimenters run into new obstacles.

There is one way that the time can be telescoped. It is by the same approach that was used to move atomic fission from the theoretical and experimental stage to the practical and production stage in two and a half years. That was a problem at least as difficult; many scientists thought it could never be solved. Yet through the Manhattan Project empowered to use unlimited money and resources the answer was arrived at.

So we come to a final question in this interesting problem: If a theoretical solution is possible, why has not another Manhattan Project been launched to achieve it on the practical and production side? The unknown X in the problem is the element of time. Those who are thinking most deeply on this problem will only say that there may still be enough time.

Panic Hoarding

Panic-hoarding is not in fear of shortage, but is a "hedge" against profiteering.

While shadow-boxing against the almost uncatchable number of little "hoarders," our House of Representatives takes no apparent interest in the underlying cause, the profiteer.

As one of the steps in convincing the public that higher prices are assured (on everything), consider the case of an egg sandwich eaten at a lunch counter. Certainly "hoarding" cannot apply in this case. But while we hear that egg prices have increased about 5 percent, the lunch counter of a large chain store has jumped the charge for the sandwich by 33 1/3 percent from the former 15-cent price.

In such indirect ways, panic-hoarding is given constant encouragement. Let the Eighty-first Congress take note.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

David And Goliath

LAST FRIDAY in the Council of Europe at Strausbourg Mr. Churchill described again "the terrible facts"—that "The Soviet forces in Europe, measured in active divisions, in air force and in armored vehicles, outnumber the forces of the Western Union by at least six or seven to one." He went on to say that "in my judgment we have a breathing space." He put the breathing space at two years. If in that brief time "we can create a trustworthy system of defense against the Communist invasion," we shall have "the best chance of a final settlement by negotiation with the Soviet on the basis of our strength and not of our weakness."

Lippmann

The breathing space of two years is, of course, an estimate of the time it would take the Soviet to accumulate an atomic stockpile sufficiently big to overawe, because it is sufficient to devastate, the industrial centers of western Europe and of the British Isles. If I understand him correctly, Mr. Churchill believes, however, that the atomic threat to western Europe can be neutralized by the much larger American stockpile if western Europe is able to defend itself with conventional arms against invasion.

THE THEORY would seem to be something like this: suppose American atomic weapons are 100 and Russian are 25. Then a purely atomic war is unlikely. For while the Russians can do fearful damage with their 25, they will suffer more damage from our 100. On the other hand, we cannot consider a preventive strike because the retaliatory force of the Soviet's 25 would be so fearful.

But in fact there are also the conventional forces where the ratio of power in Russia's favor is about as 100 is to Europe's 15. If this disparity persists, then when Russia has the atomic weapons to knock out western Europe, it can invade western Europe with its armies. For we shall be deterred from striking with atomic bombs at the Russian cities because of the helplessness of London, Paris, Brussels, Frankfurt in face of Russian atomic bombs.

This is, I believe, the bare bones of the argument as to why the rapid increase of the defensive power in western Europe is so important.

HOWEVER, if we are candid and willing to see things as they are, then we must say that the military plans of the Atlantic powers—including ourselves—give no assurance, and indeed not much hope, that a trustworthy system of defense will exist in Europe by 1952. Even if we suppose that the obvious difficulties are overcome, the fact is that the Soviet reserves of military manpower are so great that their ratio of superiority can be maintained without difficulty. It will take the Russians much less time to transport new divisions into Europe than it will take western Europe to train and equip new divisions.

Nevertheless, could the great bulk of the military power of the Atlantic community be concentrated for the defense of the Atlantic community, there would be no reason to despair. There would indeed be much reason for confidence. We can make it so difficult to invade Europe, we can make it so fearfully dangerous and expensive to try an invasion, that the probability is that the invasion would not be attempted. But to do that there must be in Europe and in America a will to resist based on the deep conviction among the peoples of Europe and the Americas that their whole military effort is dedicated to the defense of their own lands and of their own civilization, and to nothing else. The whole military potential of the Atlantic community should be enough to defend the Atlantic community. But it is not enough to do a lot more than that. It is not enough to suppress revolution all over Asia. If the forces of the Atlantic community are dispersed all over the globe, there will be neither the necessary forces nor the human conviction to defend our own civilization.

THE "TERRIBLE facts" about the enormous superiority of the Soviet forces in Europe must be looked at with the knowledge that in Asia the ratio against us is even greater. We are outnumbered. The Communist orbit is bigger than the Atlantic community. It has more soldiers, and they are quite as willing to die in battle as the soldiers of the non-Communist world.

Imperative as it is to raise the military power of the Atlantic community as rapidly as possible, we shall be attempting to carry water in a sieve if we do not adjust our political ideas to the military realities. The Atlantic community is outnumbered by the Communist orbit. In that predicament the classic, and indeed the only possible, policy for the smaller coalition is to conserve its strength while it works to divide its opponents.

That is why the course which we are following, largely because of internal political pressure, is so tragically dangerous to the vital interests of the United States and of the Atlantic community. For what we are doing is to make it easy for the Russians to induce the Chinese to adhere to the Kremlin, and we are identifying ourselves with armed opposition to the great masses of Asia and to most of their intellectual and spiritual leaders.

AGAINST the advice and judgment of our European allies and of the strongest and the best of our disinterested friends in Asia, we have made it impossible for ourselves to take the only course by which we could hope to reduce the fearful odds against us. That is to refuse to regard China as a Russian satellite and to treat the government in Peking as if it were, so that it may have the chance and the reason to become, an independent Chinese government.

For only if and when the historic divisions of national interest within the Communist orbit assert themselves, can there be again some kind of balance of power in the world. Only then can the Atlantic community hope to find security against the armed hordes of Eurasia.

Foreign Policy Issue Divides Senate Committee in Anger sight" and tangled with Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) on the Senate floor.

McMahon said Republicans were trying to "cut themselves in on the victories of our foreign policy" by saying these resulted from bipartisan efforts, while branding the defeats as Administration blunders.

His charge that GOP Leader Wherry "doggedly fought almost every Administration effort to keep Europe out of the hands of the Communists" and helped cut the Voice of America program brought the Nebraskan to his feet.

Wherry declared McMahon, up for reelection this year, was playing politics with the Korean war effort and trying to "whitewash" Administration foreign policy.

"In a political year, he wants to blame the Senator from Nebraska for starting the Korean war," said Wherry. "The people of Connecticut should know that."

Again Demands Acheson Quit

Wherry repeated his frequent demand for the resignation of Secretary of State Acheson and said the Democrats will find out in November that the people are opposed to Acheson's record.

Senator Homer Capehart (R. Ind.) got into the debate to say the Administration will be held "100 percent responsible" for our foreign policy. He said that "regardless of who voted for what or who said what when" Congress has given the Administration everything it sought in the foreign affairs field.

Senator William Benton (D. Conn.) asked the Senate a series of questions designed to bring out the extent of GOP opposition to our foreign policy moves.

Benton said he was "deeply disturbed" that minority members of the Foreign Relations Committee saw fit to "jeopardize our bipartisan foreign policy."

Some of Benton's questions:

Who — Republicans or Democrats—led the fight to cut foreign aid programs?

Has the Republican party, with the exception of a few members like Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, ever really recognized the nature of the Soviet attack?

What was the record of the Republican party on aid for Korea?

The weekend statement that so aroused Administration leaders was signed by these four Republican members of the Foreign Relations committee: Alexander Wiley (Wis.), H. Alexander Smith (N. J.), Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Iowa) and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (Mass.)

Senator Vandenberg, who is still convalescing from a long illness, did not sign the statement, but a footnote said he was "in general agreement with the viewpoint."

Wiley, ranking Republican member in Vandenberg's absence, accused Connally of making "a political slapback at a factual statement, that had no partisan bias."

"It would be a wholesome thing if the Democrats, who have made so many mistakes, would admit one or two of them," said Wiley.

Smith Also Disavows Bias

Senator Smith similarly dis -

Senator Smith similarly disastatement.

"We were simply trying to marshal the facts as we saw them," said Smith. "We opened and closed the statement with an appeal for unity. The statement was issued in response to inquiries all of us have had for the foreign policy facts. We tried to avoid exaggeration and to keep the statement objective."

Saying he will continue to work for bipartisan cooperation, Smith added:

"We feel that by recognizing and facing up to the mistakes of the past we can chart a more effective course for the future."

In romping on the statement, Connally stressed that Republicans have been "consulted and conferred with" on all major foreign policy problems. He noted that former GOP Senator John Foster Dulles is a member of the State Department staff. He said Dulles was in Korea only a few days before the North Korean attack "and did not report any danger to South Korea at that time."

Decries "Pettifogging Attacks"

"The best way to get international peace is to have unity at home, and not pettifogging attacks on the Administration by Republicans," Connally's statement continued.

"Of course, the statement, as most Republican political documents, complains of the 'blunders' in which they participated at the time, but now criticize and attacks . . .

"The roll will be called. Let those who favor an aggressive policy against communism, against aggression in Korea and against political disunity and political agitation stand up and be counted. What will the answer to the roll call be by the groups who issued the political statement, purely as a document of complaint and quarrelsomeness."

McMahon's statement said Republicans "cannot absolve themselves by clinging to Senator Vandenberg's coattails?"

"The record shows that more than one-half of the Republican Party has vigorously opposed patriotic efforts to secure legislative enactments necessary to the success of the Greek-Turkish, ECA and Atlantic pact policies," McMahon added.

The Connecticut Democrat said he was "heartened" by the fact that the Republican statement "at long last" declared for international control of atomic energy.

any functions as city manager. They claimed his appointment was "illegal" because he did not possess qualifications for the job required by the city charter.

Braden was nominated last night by Councilman Karl Anderson, and the action was seconded by McCrary.

Dunn, whose salary was $6800 per annum, was unanimously voted three months severance pay.

Sixty persons present at the session clapped madly when Dunn appeared at the council session, and introduced Braden as "a very good friend of mine and an excellent city manager."

Mayor Albert M. Orme told Dunn, "I hope you won't feel that because of certain official things that we have had to do, that we have any less regard for you personally."

Last night's action apparently removed a threat to the city's $700,000 school bond issue, already sold but as yet undelivered to the buyer.

The Fairfax injunction restrained Wells from signing the bond, among other functions. The city manager's signature was necessary before delivery.

Braden is a graduate of Slippery Rock State College, Pa., and a qualified civil engineer. He has served as city manager of Hopewell, Va., 1924-1931; county manager of Arlington from 1932 to 1936; community and city manager of Greenbelt, Md., 1936 to 1943; city manager of High Point, N. C., from 1943 to 1947; and city-manager of Raleigh from 1947 to 1950.

was that the Justice Department did not want to prejudice the Judith Coplon espionage case by presenting the wire-tapping evidence to the grand jury.

Miss. Coplon, now married to one of the lawyers who defended her, Albert H. Socolov, has accused the Government of gross misconduct in trying to conceal wire-tapping activities in her case. The Government denied its case was based on material obtained by wire-tapping.

Pepper said Fay also explained why he returned the Police Department report on Lieut. Shimon to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, Superintendent of Police. The explanation, according to Pepper, was that Barrett's first contact on the wire-tapping question had been with the Justice Department's criminal division, rather than with Fay's office. Pepper said Fay therefore sent the first copy of the report back to Barrett to be forwarded to the Justice Department.

Other major developments in the Capital wire tapping probe:

1. Senator Pepper said District Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel has been instructed to confer with Hugh Fulton, Washington attorney who was chief counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee when President Truman headed it, and who later clashed with Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) when the latter was pressing the Hughes war contracts inquiry. The committee has received testimony from police officers they helped Shimon tap Fulton's phone in the Occidental Hotel here in 1947.

2. The Pepper committee fixed Thursday as the day, the Senate caucus room as the place for the first of its public hearings on material it has studied in closed meetings. First witnesses will be Police Pvt. John McHale, former assistant to Shimon in the District Attorney's office, and the man who, according to Pepper, gave the first report to Major Barrett about the alleged wire tapping. Joseph Tait, head of the United States Recording Co., also will be heard. Tait testified yesterday and according to Pepper, said he had known Shimon since 1937 and on a number of occasions had lent recording equipment to the lieutenant.

3. Hotel and telephone officials were called to a closed meeting of the Pepper committee set for 3 p. m. today.

The scheduled witnesses include William J. Nolan, in the finance business; Robert Corish, credit manager of the Mayflower Hotel; and John Howard, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. Today's session may include other witnesses.

4. Pepper said a third witness in yesterday's closed door meeting, Precinct Detective James G. Bryant, an aide of Shimon when the latter was assigned to Fay's office, testified he participated in the tapping of the Hughes phones, first at the Carlton, then at the Mayflower.

Two Days of Activity

Pepper quoted Bryant as testifying he took part for two days in tapping at the Carlton, that no one was there, and that Shimon then told them the Hughes group had moved to the Mayflower. Pepper said Bryant told the committee he heard and made notes of numerous telephone conversations between Hughes and persons in the Mayflower rooms, and between the people there and persons in other places. Pepper said Bryant linked the subject matter of the conversations he heard in the wire tapping with that of the Senate probe of Hughes by the committee headed by Senator Brewster.

Brewster has denied having wire tapping done, but has said he paid Shimon about $100 to $125 to shadow a man who shadowed the Senator during the 1947 probe. The probe revolved around the charge, and Hughes' denial of it, that he was aided by undue White House influence in obtaining $40,000,000 in war contracts. Hughes, at one point, said Senator Brewster offered to drop the inquiry if Hughes would agree to a merger of his Trans-World Airlines with Pan-American Airways. Brewster said he did not have such a conference.

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) who was chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee in the last Congress, has been reported as the member to whom Brewster said he talked about the man shadowing him. Bridges, also, it was learned yesterday, commended Shimon to the Police Department in September, 1947. Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) also gave Shimon a commendation in April of 1948. Both the Federal grand jury and Pepper's group are looking into the question whether Shimon did wiretapping for the House investigating committee headed by Macy.

Denies Any Wire Tapping

Macy has said he got Shimon's help through Barrett, but denied having Shimon do wire tapping, or knowing of any wire tapping for the committee. A high spot of the Macy inquiry was a sensational hearing on the Washington gray market in automobiles.

As Fay left the hearing, reporters asked if he had ever been aware of Shimon's alleged wire tapping activities. Fay said that until the results of the police investigation of wire tapping, he knew nothing about it.

Fay, according to Pepper, attributed the failure of the grand jury to indict to a failure to prove the information obtained was divulged, a point of proof necessary to show a criminal offense. Pepper said Fay testified there was circumstantial evidence Shimon made the alleged wire tappings for the purpose of obtaining information to divulge. He quoted Fay as making clear he did not know the wire tapping was going on. He said Fay expressed violent disapproval of wire tapping.

Fay was quoted by Pepper as saying he learned from Shimon in 1947 that the latter was doing work for a committee, but that Shimon gave no details.

Apparently No Bosses

Pepper said it appeared from the testimony that Shimon and his aides did not report to anyone and had no bosses and that Fay exerted no control over the hours of the police officers. That practice, said Pepper, "is a very questionable one."

Pepper said Fay had commended Shimon to Barrett in a letter in 1947. Beyond that, Pepper said, Fay gave no evaluation to the committee of Shimon's services. Pepper was asked whether Fay was taking any precautions to protect the public from wire tapping. Pepper said Fay did not mention any. A spokesman for the District Attorney's office said later the office has no investigative staff of its own to assign to such work.

Truman Urges Jobs for Aging citizens who either cannot or do not wish to continue their jobs could be used in part-time or consulting capacities in their specialties, or could go into new lines of work.

Ewing added that he personally advocated more widespread acceptance of older workers by business and industry. He pointed out that the Nation may be heading toward the point where it will have to rely heavily on older workers, as it did in World War II.

Another dinner speaker, Dr. Edmund V. Cowdry, of St. Louis, Mo., told the delegates that the present movement concerning older people "is approaching a social Magna Carta" for the aged.

Such a bill of rights for them, he said, would guarantee the right of everyone to have "socially useful experiences and opportunities to do worthwhile things for others."

A special citation was awarded at the dinner to Miss Ollie A. Randall for her "contributions to the problems of aging" and her "aid in the preparation for this conference." The citation was presented by Ewing to Miss Randall, who is consultant on aging for the Community Service Society of New York City.

Dr. Alvin S. Johnson, New York economist and educator, told the dinner assembly that the "damping down of initiative and productivity" under compulsory retirement at a fixed age will result in a 7 to 8 percent loss of the Nation's manpower when such retirement systems become universal.

"It is not a morally healthy society in which men and women at any particular age are shoved into the chimney corner by the stroke of the calendar," Johnson declared.

Francis Perkins, commissioner of Civil Service and former Secretary of Labor, said that the United States is in an even worse position than it was in 1941 with respect to the number of skilled hands available for war production. She attributed this to absence of men in military service during World War II and a postwar decline in apprenticeship.

"We cannot make everything by pushbuttons," she declared.

Earlier, at a conference work session on medical research, Dr. Cowdry urged that more intensive study be made on the so-called smooth muscles of the human body, and the relation of their deterioration to the aging processes. These are the elastic fibers that give resiliency to the skin, the bloodways, bladder, intestines and other vital organs.

Though existence of the elastic fibers has been known now for almost a century, Dr. Cowdry said, very little is known of their construction. New investigative means, prncipally the electron microscope and improved techniques in chemical analyses, now make such a study feasible, he pointed out.

Doctors need to know why these special "coil springs" fail in certain areas of the body and not in others, he said.

A nationally-known authority on medical studies in relation to the aged, Dr. Cowdry ic research professor of anatomy at Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, and director of its Wernse Cancer Laboratory.

Other speakers at yesterday's work sessions of the 800 conference delegates tackled problems of employment, education, religion and other fields of special interest for aging persons.

Two experts urged the establishment of special schools for people who are aging.

The schools, set up principally for persons already retired from industry, should also be open to others of pre-retirement years to prepare them better for their life to come, he sad.

Dr. Martin Gumpert, New York gerontologist, advocated that education extend beyond the present school ages "to make education a lifetime opportunity."

"We will have to undertake the boldest education program in history if we are to maintain the social functions of the aging," he declared.

building and strengthening the United Nations.

The rites were conducted in 45 precision-timed minutes, like hundreds of other funeral services held in Arlington Cemetery. Some 200 kinfolk and friends and curious attended.

Also there were Secretary of Army Frank C. Pace, jr., and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff. The Republic of South Korea was represented by two embassy officials, Counselor Sae Sun Kim and First Secretary Pyo Wook Han. The Korean Ambassador, Dr. John Myun Chang, had planned to attend, but was called to New York for a meeting of the United Nations Security Council.

Lieutenant Howell, who grew up here and who lived at 3449 17th st. nw. with his father and grandmother, Mrs. Albert L. Shumaker, died on July 17 in Tokyo as a result of artillery shell wounds suffered on the Korean front three days before. His body arrived here Friday.

The services yesterday were begun outside the Fort Myer chapel at 1:30 p.m. A guard of honor from the Third Infantry Regiment met the hearse with present arms. The United States Army Band played "Abide with Me" as six soldiers carried the bronze-colored casket into the chapel, where services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Dowdy, and the Fort Myer chaplain, Lieut. Col. Robert Homiston.

The band played Chopin's "Funeral March" and "Holy, Holy, Holy" as a caisson, drawn by seven matched grays, carried the flag-draped casket in the slow procession to the grave site in the geographic center of the cemetery.

The gravesite, a six-by-ten-foot plot, lies on the slope between the Lee Mansion and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The site was selected by the slain soldier's grandmother because it is shaded by two maple trees and a towering oak. Mrs. Shumaker did not learn until yesterday that her grandson was being buried only a hundred feet or so away from the grave of Gen. Athur MacArthur, father of the United Nations commander in Korea.

Each of the ministers offered a prayer, a squad fired three volleys over the grave, a bugler sounded taps and another sounded the echo. The flag was emoved from the casket and given to Lieut. Thomas' father.

The casket was then enclosed with a steel-lined covering and lowered into the grave. Within minutes the casket was covered with earth, and a temporary wooden marker set up over the grave. Within 60 days, a marble plaque will mark the site.

Other members of the family participating in the rites included: Mrs. E. L. Hines, of Richmond, a great aunt; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Magee and Jerry Magee, of Richmond, cousins: Mrs. J. A. McDougall, of Wilmington, N. C., a great aunt; John McDougall, of Wilmington, a cousin; and Miss M. A. Fowler, of Tabor City, N. C., a close friend of the family.

Six school and service friends served as honorary pallbearers. They are Tom Pence, of Arlington; George Lee, Lloyd Hyde, Peter Ciccolella, Walter Wills, of Washington; and 1st Lieut. Stanley Hobbs, who had attended parachute school at Fort Benning with Lieut. Thomas.

Lieut. Thomas was the first Washingtonian to be listed as wounded, and later as killed, in the Korean war. Thus far, two District residents have been killed, 14 wounded, and 6 are missing.

Westinghouse Raises Prices of Some TVs

Sunbury, Pa., Aug. 14 (AP).—Westinghouse television and radio division announced today price increases ranging from $10 to $30 on eight models in the 1951 television line and increases of $1 to $30 on five radio models.

The company said increased production expense, included sharp rises in certain component costs, made the adjustment necessary. But it added an across-the-board boost was avoided by analysis of the costs incurred in manufacturing each model.

Investment Company Sales Policy Charted

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday made public a statement of policy with respect to the use, form, and content of sales literature and advertising employed by dealers and underwriters in the sale of investment company securities.

This statement of policy was prepared with the cooperation of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., after an exhaustive review of some 5000 samples of advertising and sales literature. Dealers and underwriters engaged in promoting the sale of investment company shares voluntarily submitted the material for the joint examination and appraisal.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Cotton futures were under pressure of hedge selling and commission house profit-taking today. Final prices were $1.95 to $3.30 a bale lower.

Anticipation of further extensive hedging against purchase of CCC 1948 pooled cotton, and against the new cotton crop, restricted demand for futures. Most offerings were absorbed through scale-down mill covering against textile sales. Uncertainly over price and wage control legislation accounted for some selling.

Distant new crop months were off more than $3 a bale on Washington trade reports indicating economic officials may seek a larger acreage goal next year with a view to producing a 15-million-bale cotton crop. The need for larger acreage, the advices said, was based on the belief that carryover stocks of cotton in the United States will be dangerously low by July next year because of prospective larger military demands.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—The grain market drifted slowly downward today in what brokers described as the lightest trading session since the fighting started in Korea.

At the end, losses ranging to more than 3 cents in soybeans and almost 2 cents in wheat were recorded. There were times when corn showed flashes of strength, but at the final gong even all the yellow cereal contracts were under the previous close.

Wheat ended 1 1/8 to 1 7/8 lower; corn was 1/8 to 1 cent lower; oats were 3/8 to 1/2 lower; rye was 1 3/4 lower to 1/4 higher; soybeans were 2 1/8 to 3 1/4 lower, and lard was 5 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The buying in corn was based primarily on another cool night in the Midwest. There also may have been some buying on the possibility of corn borer damage, traders said.

to complete the roster of workers in the unit, which canavsses about 18,000 firms in Washington with less than 15 employes.

More than 1000 workers will be recruited, including leaders for five zones, 10 areas, 50 divisions and 240 teams.

A partner in the firm of Johnston, Lemon & Co., Ness is president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and of the Washington Stock Exchange.

Haggerty, who is the Washington manager of the Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California, has worked on the Business II unit in the past two Chest drives.

Independent Steel Union Optimistic

Weirton, W. Va., Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Thousands of residents believed today that within 24 hours they will have won half their battle to set up a new independent steel workers' union before the CIO can start a local organizing campaign.

"Minute Men" groups of merchants, businessmen and independent unionists used newspaper advertisements, the radio and house-to-house appeals in an effort to persuade 10,000 Weirton Steel Co. employes to join the new independent union.

The old Weirton Independent union, which had gone strikeless for 11 years, was outlawed by a United States Circuit Court decision on the ground that it was a "company union."

The drive to create a new independent started four days ago but no CIO organizers appeared in Weirton although Philip Murray's Steelworkers said they would start an organizing drive.

Labor quarters believed the absence of organizers meant the CIO would try to block recognition of the new independent, charging that it, too, was "company dominated."

President William Huff of the new union said, "In the first four days of our organizing campaign, more than 4400 have joined, and I believe that more than half will be members in another 24 hours."

Residents seeking to keep Weirton free of steel strikes as it has been for more than a decade helped raise funds and button holed steel workers on streets for sales talks.

7200 Chemical Workers' Strike Threatens To Cut Deeply Into Vital Defense Output

By The Associated Press

A strike of 7200 chemical workers in plants in four States yesterday was threatening to cut deeply into production of vital defense materials.

The Defense and Commerce Departments and the Munitions Board were watching closely the efforts of Federal mediators to settle the dispute. One Government official indicated some new form of Federal intervention may be tried shortly.

The strike over wages and $100 pensions at Allied Chemical and Dye Corp. plants in Syracuse, Detroit and Baton Rouge, La., and at the Diamond Alkali Co. plant in Painesville, Ohio, has slowed the supply of soda ash—or sodium carbonate—to a trickle.

Soda ash is widely used in producing things like chlorine, which is used to purify drinking water; plastics, glass, rubber, high octane gasoline, chrome, synthetic cloth, dry cell batteries, textiles, key chemicals, paper and water softeners.

The strikers are members of District 50, United Mine Workers, headed by A. D. (Dennie) Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis.

The Commerce Department said the four plants together turn out at least 50 to 60 per cent of the soda ash supply, plus 25 to 30 per cent of the caustic soda, and 10 to 20 percent of the chlorine produced in the Nation.

Some glass manufacturers report they are feeling the pinch of the strike acutely. One Government authority said the shortage of soda ash is spreading like a chain reaction from plant to plant dependent on it.

8000 Packard Workers Ordered to Strike

Detroit, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The CIO United Auto Workers union today ordered its 8000 members at Packard Motor Car Co. to walk out at midnight to back up demands for a new contract.

UAW Local 190 officials said the members decided to strike because the "company is stalling." The UAW's contract with Packard expired June 12 and has been extended on a day-to-day basis. Pensions and insurance demands are the major stumbling blocks in the contract talks.

A walkout would hit Packard at a bad time since it now is producing a new model that is scheduled for public display August 24.

Bus and Trolley Tie-up In St. Louis Ends

St. Louis, Aug. 14 (AP).—Buses and streetcars were rolling on schedule again tonight after a three-day stoppage caused by wildcat elements of union men trying for higher wages.

Lyman E. Winder, a bus driver who led a walkout early Friday despite the urging of his union leaders and despite the fact that the State government had taken over the system, called it off "in the public interest" early today.

Thus he paved the way for further negotiation of the union's demand for a wage raise of seven cents an hour, as recommended by a public panel, going back to January 1.

All TCI Mines Closed By Walkout of 4500

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 14 (AP).—All Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. mines employing more than 4500 union miners were closed today by a labor dispute.

Pickets patrolled the mines at nearby Ishkooda, Muscoda and Wenonah, the central ore-conditioning plant at Wenonah, and TCI's Dolonah limestone quarry.

R. E. Farr, United Steelworkers of America (CIO) district director, said the dispute centered on the company's "inequity program in its ore mines, quarries and ore-conditioning plant." The union is asking job reclassifications that would result in increasing the scale generally by 9 to 12 1/2 cents an hour.

Communication Parley Off

The Hague Aug. 14 (AP).—A Dutch Foreign Office spokesman today said the International Telecommunications Conference scheduled to open in September has been called off "because of the international political situation."

Not Sportsmanship

Leo Durocher Aims Sights on Victories

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, AUG. 14 (NYHT).—When Al Barlick asked Leo Durocher to have Eddie Stanky impersonate a cigar-store Indian for sweet sportsmanship's sake, Durocher agreed as a favor to the umpire. But he added an editorial comment.

"'Indelicacy' sportsmanship," Mr. Durocher said. "I'm here to win, and nobody makes it easy for me." Spoken like a mug and a true professional. The practically peerless leader of the Giants was correct. And coarse.

Red Smith

When Stanky violated the covenant by waving to Andy Seminick in an effort to distract the Philadelphia batsman, Lon Warneke fired Stanky out of the ball game. The umpire was wrong. It was an abuse of authority to act as though Durocher's indulgence had the force of a rule.

The game was completed under formal protest by Durocher and the Giants lost in the eleventh inning. The umpires had admitted that Stanky was violating no rule and that they were powerless to stop him. But they did stop him. Yet even when he entered his protest, the chances are Durocher realized he would be supported by nothing save logic. It was a foregone conclusion that the National League president, Ford Frick, required by circumstance to back up his umpires, would deny the protest.

TAKING ACTION after the facts, Frick forebade any further shenanigans intended to disconcert batsmen and instructed his umpires to act in the future as they did act in the Stanky case. But because he is conscientious as well as fair, Ford probably will reprove Warneke privately for arrogating to himself the manager's authority to make a player behave.

"Temper, Lonnie, temper," Mr. Frick will scold, rapping the umpire's knuckles.

The whole affair was a brattish business characteristic of brats. It began up in Boston when Bob Elliott asked Barlick, the umpire at second base, to step out of his line of vision when Elliot was batting. When Barlick complied, Stanky took the umpire's place and began thrashing his arms around to annoy the hitter. He did the same thing to Seminick in Philadelphia until, at Barlick's request, Durocher called him off.

Then Seminick knocked the Giants' Hank Thompson stiff in a play a third base. Whereupon Durocher reasoned that if the Phillies were going to play rough they were no sense in the Giants' overdoing gentility.

LEO THE LOGICIAN was, as stated at the outset, entirely correct. In matters like this his reasoning is almost always sound because he never has been deluded by the popular misconception of professional baseball as a sport.

Big league baseball is a game and a business, but it is not a sport. Where players are bought and sold and traded, fined and suspended, used up and discarded and blacklisted, that's business. Where stockholers bicker about profits and expenditures, that's business. Where employes are rewarded strictly according to performance, judged exclusively on their ability to help win and draw money at the gate, that's business.

Fans who call it a sport do not applaud sportsmanship. They do not subscribe to the sporting maxim, "May the better team win." They want their team to win. When the opposing shortstop kicks in the winning run, they holler with jubilation.

THERE IS A sterling British sportsman named Jack who operates a sterling British pub just off the strand in London. One day an effort was being made to explain to him the American enthusiasm for baseball, the avidity with which fans follow the fortunes of their team and rejoice when their teams wins, no matter how.

Jack frowned. "They applaud the other chap's errors?" he asked, appalled.

They did, indeed, he was told. This was a competition, but it wasn't like amateur sports. It was a great game, whose object was to win. Winning was the aim of the owners, the managers, the players, the fans. Errors were part of the game. Over a season, the better team made the fewer errors and that was one reason why it won the more games. Frequently a crowd would clap or stomp or shout in concert in hope of disconcerting the enemy pitcher. They would yell "Boo" as an infielder tried for a ground ball.

OH, THEY WOULD applaud exceptionally good plays by the enemy, too. It wasn't that they had paid their money to come and see errors, as such. But they had paid to come and see their team win, by whatever legal means might be necessary.

Jack waited politely through all this explanation but he wasn't really listening. He nodded and nodded but his expression of disapproval did not change. And at the end he said:

"Applaudin' errors. It's not good."

There could never be a meeting of the minds between Jack and Mr. Durocher. "'Indelicacy' sportsmanship," Mr. Durocher says. "I'm here to win."

Stanky says that if a second baseman tried to distract him when he was at bat, he'd try to knock the ball down the guy's throat, but he wouldn't act like an 'indelicacy' crybaby. Jack might approve of that.

Six Suspensions Recommended for NCAA Violators

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP)—Declining to name names, the National Collegiate Athletic Associaton Council today recommended suspension of six 1950 reported violators of the NCAA's controversial "sanity code."

The policy-making council, following a weekend session here, also reviewed the cases of five other suspected violators, but deferred action until evidence is further studied.

The council's recommendation of suspension must be submitted to the full NCAA convention in Dallas, Texas, January 10-13 and a majority vote of the estimated 312 members is necessary to blacklist.

St. Teresa Wins, Ties For Title in CYO Loop

St. Teresa and St. Francis Desales tied for the first half championship in the CYO league as the result of a 5-2 victory by St. Teresa in a game yesterday between these two teams at Anacostia Park. Bob Watson pitched a five-hitter for the winners. Don Beall hit two triples, batted in two runs and scored one himself.

Ransom's 69 Wins 'World' Golf Playoff By 3 Strokes

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Henry Ransom of Dallas went six strokes under par on a sensational five-hole streak to blast Detroit's Chick Harbert, 69—72 in an 18-hole playoff today and won $11,000 as Tam O'Shanter's "world" golf champion.

The first major triumph for the 39-year-old Texan netted him the biggest cash prize the sport has ever offered. It boosted him from 10th place on the pro's money winning list to second with a total of $18,885.

Sam Snead is still well ahead in the money chase with $29,048. Jim Ferrier, the erstwhile runner-up, now is unofficially third with $18,771.

Harbert's second award today was $5000, upping his earnings to $8398.

Ransom, whose only prime victories in 13 years on the circuit were in 1948 at St. Paul and last year at Wilmington, made each playoff shot against the hard-hitting Harbert count for about $87.

The Cards

Par out	453	444	435	—36
Ransom out	553	344	543	—36
Harbert out	453	554	535	—37
Par in	534	445	344	—36
Ransom in	423	354	444	—33—69
Harbert in	524	545	334	—35—72

One stroke behind at the 8th hole, Ransom uncorked one of the most blistering sub-par sprees in the books.

He knocked his four-wood second shot from the rough on No. 9 a dozen feet from the pin and was down for eagle 3.

Ransom then birdied the next four holes. He missed a 10-foot putt on No. 10 which would have given him a consecutive eagle. He settled for a 4. He birdied 11 and 12 with 12 and 15-foot putts, and added another birdie to the string on No. 13 by holing a 70-foot pitch shot.

Earlier, Ransom had dropped a 60-foot chip shot on the fourth for another birdie.

For 10 successive holes, Ransom never had a par. Beginning at No. 7 and ending with No. 16, he was one-over-par four times and under par six.

In coupling 37—35 for his even par 72, the 35-year-old Harbert led for the first three holes, then had to get square on the seventh with a 6-foot birdie putt to Ransom's 5, as the tide changed.

Ransom's torrid spree put him five strokes ahead going to the 14th tee. Harbert parred the next three, while his opponent cooled off somewhat. The Chick birdied the 17th with a 12-footer to pick up another stroke, being three strokes behind, but the move came too late as Ransom welded 36—33 for 69.

Reds, Win, 13-8 On 11-Run 3d

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—An 11-run third inning permitted Cincinnati to stand off piecemeal rally efforts by Pittsburgh today and breeze to a 13-8 victory before 4306 paid fans and 5547 kiddies.

The Reds put their big frame together on only five hits, capitalizing on four walks and two hit batsmen contributed by a trio of Pirate hurlers.

265-Pounder Plays Rough

Redskins Couldn't Lick Lipscomb, So They're Glad He's Joined Them

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

LOS ANGELES, AUG. 14.—Tackle Paul Lipscomb, the ruffian from the hills of Tenn-o-see, is going over with a bang for the Washington Redskins.

Better make that two bangs, because Lipscomb today just socked another lineman in a little hand-to-hand skirmish at close quarters at the line of scrimmage.

Wilbur Moore

The rough, tough 165-pounder reported to the Redskins from Green Bay last week with a well-deserved reputation for not being the gentle type.

The Redskins who doubted it found out they were wrong an hour after Lipscomb donned a uniform. Asked if he'd like to play a little defense on his first day in camp, Lipscomb said "I'm ready."

On the second play after he entered the game, he crashed into rookie Tackle George Bayer of Washington University. Bayer got up holding a cut lip and a rapidly swelling right eye.

This afternoon, Lipscomb tangled, inadvertently naturally, with George Hekkers, a journeyman tackle from Detroit, and Hekkers now knows how Bayer felt last week.

While Hekkers and Bayers are regulars at Trainer Eddie Anderson's patch 'em up emporium, the Redskin coaches are smiling that happy smile.

He's mean; that's what makes him a good tackle, chimed in Line marked Backfield Coach Wilbur Moore, who's been tackled by Lipscomb and who's seen Wilkin in action many times.

He's mean that's what makes him a good tackle, chimed in Line Coach Max Reed, who's seen tackles come and go for 20 years.

Herman Ball

Sammy Baugh and Center Al Demao were almost as thrilled as Head Coach Ball and his assistants when it was announced last week that Lipscomb had been obtained from the Packers in a swap for Len Szafaryn. Both have had personal contact with Mr. Lipscomb.

Out in Milwaukee last year, Lipscomb dived over Redskins' Guard Johnny Steber trying to block a Baugh pass. He missed the ball, but his fist landed right in Sambo's mouth.

"You shouldn't ought to be pickin' on an old man like me," Baugh told Lipscomb as the officials stepped off a 15-yard penalty. Three plays later, Demao felt "my right side cave in." It was merely Lipscomb's knee crashing into Demao.

That cost the Packers 15 more yards, but it didn't help Demao's side.

"I don't think Paul's the type to pick up a blocker and throw him bodily at the punter like Wilkin did 11 years ago against the Lions," Moore recalled. "He won't show the blocker that much consideration. He'll try to mangle him."

"I'm not mean," Lipscomb was explaining today. "I was taught to protect myself at all times. It gets pretty rough up there in the line some time and you gotta be ready." And Lipscomb's ready. Take it from Baugh, Demao, Bayer, Hekker and a few other casualties.

Ward's Hit In 9th Beats Cards, 7-6

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs were within one strike of defeat today, but with two strikes on him and the tying and winning runs on base, Preston Ward singled to give the Cubs a 7 to 6 victory over the Cardinals.

After tying the score twice, the Cardinals seemingly had won the game in the eighth with two runs on Marty Marion's walk, singles by Rocky Nelson and Del Rice and a bad throw by Bob Borkowski.

But the Cards had reckoned without Andy Pafko and Ward. The former put the Cubs back in contention in the last of the eighth with his twenty-seventh homer of the season.

Then in the ninth, the Cubs disposed of Harry (The Cat) Brecheen when Mickey Owen and Hal Jeffcoat led off with singles. Carmen Mauro batted for Twig Terwilliger and struck out. Borkowski suffered a similar fate, but Jeffcoat stole second on the third stike and Ward came to bat.

2 D. C. Players Lose at Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 14.—George Herbert, last Washington player in the men's singles, followed Frank Dunham of Arlington, Va., out of national public parks tennis championship contention here today.

Linn Rockwood of Provo, Utah, ousted Herbert 6—0, 6—1, 6—1.

Dunham lost to Jack Simpson, Oakland, Calif., 6—1, 6—1, 6—4.

Mrs. Herbert's also bowed out in the opening round of women's singles. Mary Hernando, Detroit champion, made a snappy service and sharp forehand do for a 6—0, 6—3 triumph.

John J. McCarthy, Georgetown senior, lost opening day.

Washington remains represented in one more event, the mixed doubles. Play begins Wednesday with the Herberts meeting Mary Arnold Prentiss and Clyde Hippenstiel of San Bernardino, Calif.

Le Baron Reported Quantico-Bound, Will Play in 2 Redskin Exhibitions

Los Angeles, Aug. 14.—The Marine Corps late today gave Eddie LeBaron permission to play for the Washington Redskins against the Los Angeles Rams Wednesday night and also against the San Francisco 49ers in San Francisco Sunday.

LeBaron, who went on active duty with the Marines this morning at Camp Pendleton, will rejoin the Marines next Monday and will be sent to Quantico, Va., to prepare for officers' candidate school.

The 165-pound quarterback from the College of the Pacific said he did not know whether he would be a candidate for the Quantico team.

"I do not wish to do anything to stir up criticism. If the Marines want me to play for them in Quantico and I can do it and not jeopardize my duties as an officer candidate I will play," he said.

Nats Hope to Exploit Yanks' Weakness With Lefties

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The Nats will try to exploit the New York Yankees' weakness against lefthanders today by sending Gene Bearden and Bob Kuzava against them in two games that will test public reaction to a new plan at Griffith Sadium.

These games will be played under unusual circumstances in that the first game will begin at 2:30 o'clock and the second at 8:30 o'clock. Separate admissions will be charged.

This will be Owner Clark Griffith's experiment in splitting two games in one day—an experiment proved succesful in other cities, including Brooklyn.

Sen. Langer (R., N. Dak.) recently called Griffith a "war profiteer" on the floor of the Senate for charging two admissions to the day and night games. Owner Branch Rickey of Brooklyn later came stoutly to Griffith's support.

The general public will have its say this afternoon and tonight—by the numbers in which the separate games are attended.

For the Yankees it will be Ed Lopat (13-7) and, in the night game, Rookie Whitey Ford (2-0).

Except for their inability to beat southpaws, the Yankees might be on top of the American League instead of a poor second, 3½ games behind the Detroit Tigers.

The Yankees have lost three of their last six games, all to lefties, Lou Brissie and Alex Kellner of the Athletics and Mel Parnell of the Red Sox. They beat another lefty, Chuck Stobbs of the Bosox, 2-1, with only five hits.

Four of the Nats' five victories over New York were registered by portsiders. Steve Nagy beat them twice and Al Sima and Mickey Harris did the trick once each. Because Nagy couldn't beat anybody else, he was shipped back to the minors.

In his last start against the Yanks, Kuzava pitched nine innings to a 3-3 tie, called because of darkness. Bob's record is 7-7. Bearden has won 1 and lost 5.

Among the other lefthanders who've held some kind of spell over the Yanks are Stubby Overmire of the Browns, who has whipped the mtwice, Rookie Bob Cain of the White Sox who shut them out twice and Billy Pierce of the White Sox, who won a 1-hitter over them.

On Waivers

Ortiz Goes To Athletics

Roberto Ortiz's nine-year career as pitcher, outfielder and Spanish interpreter for Washington ended yesterday as the Nats sold him to the Philadelphia Athletics for the $10,000 waiver price.

His 35 years and .214 batting average were the big reasons for his departure.

Also, his value to the team as an interpreter for his Cuban countrymen, Conrado Marrero and Sandalio Consuegra of the pitching staff was declining sharply, with Marrero picking up enough English to understand Manager Bucky Harris' orders directly.

The Nats were hoping they could get waivers on Ortiz so he could be sent to help their Havana farm club. They put him on the waiver list a month ago, but the A's put in a claim, and his name was withdrawn. This time, the Nats let him go.

Ortiz was one of Scout Joe Cambria's earliest Latin contributions to the Washington club. Cambria claimed that he trekked 150 miles through the Cuban canebrakes to find the 6-foot-4-inch 210-pounder, with a reputation as a slugger and fastball pitcher.

Cage Stags Change Name to Bruins

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Chicago entry in the national basketball association, formerly the Stags, will be called the Bruins.

Abe Saperstein, owner of the famed Harlem Globe-Trotters, acquired the Stag franchise recently.

Frick Rejects Giants' Protest

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Ford Frick ruled out today the protest of the New York Giants over Saturday's wild game with the Philadelphia Phillies, and told Leo Durocher to curb the antics of Eddie Stanky.

Manager Durocher played the game under protest after Stanky was thrown out for jumping up and down and waving his arms to distract Andy Seminick who was at bat. The Phillies won 5-4 in 11 innings.

Bunker Hill Wins Legion Playoff, 6-1

Sonny Wise threw a four-hitter at Fort Stevens, pitching Bunker Hill to a 6-1 decision yesterday at Anacostia and the right to represent Washington in the Junior American Legion regional tournament at Fairmont, W. Va., August 20.

Bill Smith was the loser. He was touched for only seven singles but Bunker Hill bunched them for two runs in the fifth and put the game on ice with four in the eighth.

Baltimore Colts Show Strong Running Game, Plenty of Fight in Opener With Steelers

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It's still too early to tell, but off their first exhibition it appears that the Baltimore Colts won't be the doormat in the National Football League . . . Winner of only one in 12 All-America Conference games last season, the Colts certainly were not disgraced in their 1950 opener when they lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers, 30-27, on a last-minute field goal by Joe Geri . . . The Steelers were Eastern runners-up in the NFL last year and only two upsets by the Washington Redskins kept them from posting an 8-3-1 record . . .

Baltimore fans seemed satisfied with the Colt effort . . . They were particularly happy to see the ington fandom has tired of Sammy Baugh passing on every play, the Colt supporters were getting weary strong running attack that outgained the Steelers' powerful singlewing offense on the ground, 167 yards to 78 . . . Just like Washof too many Y. A. Tittle passes . . .

It was an impressive march that Baltimore made after the Steelers went ahead, 27-24 . . . Taking the ball on their 15, the Colts went to the Pitt eight before a costly 11-yard loss by Herb Rich . . . With Veto Kissell chewing up most of the ground, the Colts used only one 5-yard pass on their 77-yard surge . . .

The defense wasn't bad, it was just that Baltimore couldn't stop Bobby Gage, bolt of lightning from Clemson . . . Chances are not many teams will halt the brilliant pro soph in the open field . . . He really wrecked the Colts with his 80-yard kickoff return for a touchdown; 78-yard punt return into the end zone and last-minute catch of a pass for 33 yards . . . Gage got going late last season and against the Chicago Bears tied the league record for the longest run from scrimmage, 97 yards . . . Andy Uran, Green Bay, set it in 1939 . . .

The Colts don't get much chance to relax after Sunday's thriller. They face the mighty Cleveland Browns in Cincinnati Saturday night and meet the Chicago Bears in Baltimore the following Thursday night.

Wynn Bests Newhouser, Tiger Lead Cut to 2½

Cleveland, Aug. 14—After Al Rosen matched a ninth-inning homer by Johnny Groth, the Cleveland Indians went on to shade Detroit in 10 innings, 3-2, cutting the Tiger's lead to 2½ games as they took second place.

Allie Clark doubled off Hal Newhouser to start the Tribe 10th and Jim Hegan walked. Roberto Avila ran for Clark and Pitcher Early Wynn sacrificed the runners.

Detroit passed Ray Boone purposely and Pinch-hitter Dale Mitchell grounded to Neil Berry. The shortstop's throw to the plate was too late to catch Avila and the partisan crowd of 60,120 went home happy.

They weren't happy in the ninth when Groth blasted his eighth homer of the year after Hoot Evers beat out a slow bounder over the mound to wreck Wynn's shutout. Evers and Groth fanned and popped, respectively, in the first inning when Detroit had the bases loaded with one out.

Al Rosen became the hero when he sent the game into overtime by rapping his 31st homer after two were out in the home half of the ninth.

The veteran Newhouser held three previous decisions over Cleveland in four starts.

No Video, Radio for Fight

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14.—There will be no broadcast nor telecast of tonight's NBA heavyweight title fight between Ezzard Charles and Fredie Beshore.

Ez Charles, Fred Beshore Meet Tonight

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP).—Ezzard Charles shoots for the Joe Louis jackpot tomorrow night when he risks his NBA heavyweight crown against underdog Freddie Beshore at Memorial Auditorium.

If Charles shows enough "tiger" and flattens the 5-to-1 challenger inside the 15-round limit, he wins a $500,000 September date with Louis. An upset by Beshore would scramble the situation.

Ring time for the twice-postponed indoor battle is 9:00 p. m. (EST), with the weigh-in scheduled for noon. Chairman Eddie Egan of the New York State Athletic Commission and top brass of the International Boxing Club will be among the most interested spectators.

Both Eagan and IBC officials want to see for themselves how Charles will react in his fight after a long layoff due to a "bruised heart muscle." A final decision on the Louis-Charles bout, tentatively set for Yankee Stadium September 27 depends on it.

On the records there is no comparison of the two fighters. Charles won 66, lost 5 and drew once in 72 pro fights. Since he won the title he defended twice with knockout wins over Gus Lesnevich and Pat Valentino.

Beshore, 26-year-old Navy vet, lost his last two fights to Lee Oma at Buffalo. The last one was a split decision, January 4. In 33 fights, he has won 26, lost 6 and fought a draw.

Bogley Ousted In 1st Round

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 14.—Gil Bogley of Washington, D. C., and Charles Devoe, Indianapolis, Ind., were eliminated in the first round of the men's national doubles tournament here by Hal Burrows, Charlottesville, Va., and Straight Clark, Pasadena, Calif., 11-9, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The unavoidable default of second-seeded Budge Patty, the Wimbledon champion, and ex-National titlist Ted Schroeder dulled the opening day's show.

The Californians had to drop out because Patty sprained an ankle yesterday while they were bowing to Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and Bill Talbert of New York, in the Newport Casino doubles final.

Benefiting by the default were Don Kaiser of Louisville, Ky., and Steve Potts of Memphis, Tenn., who moved into the second round against Burrows and Clark.

Police Boys Club Plays Lions Today

The Georgetown Lions Club team, winner of the Washington Boys Club league, will meet the Police Boys Club No. 4 team, winners of the Police Boys Club league, in the first of a best-two-out-of-three series for the championship of the Senior Class boys club championship. The game starts at 1 p. m.

Steeplechase Racing Out At Bel Air

Featuring a turf course, the first on a minor track in this area, the Bel Air track opens tomorrow for a 10-day session. The popular six-furlong oval, located on Route 1 north of Baltimore, has abandoned steeplechase racing.

The often unsightly hedge jumps have been removed and the old steeplechase course, which saw little use in recent years, is now a boxwood-lined greensward over which one flat race is planned for each program.

Infield turf racing has proven popular at Hialeah, Mommouth Park and Atlantic City and Managing Director G. Ray Bryson, who is back on the job after an illness, believes it will be enthusiastically received by Maryland racegoers.

Already a well-appointed racing plant, Bel Air has come through with several improvements. Of immediate interest to fans will be the recently completed 100,000-gallon water tank, eliminating the dust on dry days.

A new judges' stand, protruding from the top of the grandstand, has been built, giving officials a better view of the races.

Although there has been no thoroughbred racing in this area for five weeks, Bel Air has drawn plenty of horses. The arrivals include most of the top minor-track thoroughbreds as well as a generous showing of those from Monmouth Park, shipped by owners unable to obtain stalls at Atlantic City.

Post time for the first race is 2 p. m., with the daily double, as usual, closing 15 minutes earlier. In addition to bus service, a special B. & O. train will operate from Washington, leaving Union Station at 11:45 a. m.

New Fish Guide Phone GR. 7477

Sunday's column by The Washington Post fishing editor, Ralph Murdock, contains a reference to a 24 by 38 fishing map called the Fisherman's Guide.

Through a typographical error, the exchange of a telephone number given for sportsmen interested in obtaining the guides to call was omitted. The number is GReenbelt 7477. Ask for Thomas D. Smith.

Hall Leads D. C. Juniors

He Shoots 77, Wolfe 80 in Jaycee Golf

Ames, Iowa, Aug 14.—Bill Hall led the Washington entries in the first 18 holes qualifying play today in the National Junior golf tournament, sponsored by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Hall had a 6 over par 77 for the Iowa State College course.

Billy Wolfe, semifinalist in the USGA's National Junior at Denver, had an 80 as did Kay Fletcher. Joe O'Brien turned in an 88.

Wolfe said the course wasn't as tough as the Denver Country Club but that it played much "closer."

Denny Bolster, Silver Spring, Md., posted a 77. He is a member of the Maryland team entry.

Ken Scott, from Rockford, Ill., and Billie Sparks, Atlanta, Ga., slammed out 72s to lead the field.

They were a stroke ahead of Tom Ingham of Thomaston, Ga., who went out in 40, 4 over par, and then raced home with a 33, 2 under for the rugged second nine.

The second 18-hole qualifying round will be played tomorrow.

Junior Publinx Golf Finals Will Be Played Today

The finals of the public golf links city-wide junior tournament will be played today at East Potomac public golf course at 9 a.m.

Twenty-four boys and seven girls, survivors of more than 150 youngsters who competed, will play in three classes, girls 10-17, who will play nine holes; boys 10-13, also nine holes, and boys 14-17, who will go the full round of 18.

FBI Routs Gas Co., 15-2

The FBI smothered the Gas Co. yesterday, 15-2, in a Departmental League game on the South Ellipse. Ed Bahlow got four hits, one a home run, for the winners.

U. S. Davis Cup Squad Named

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Tom Brown of San Francisco, Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif. Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., and Billy Talbert of New York were named as the United States Davis Cup team today. They will defend the huge trophy against Australia at Forest Hills, N. Y., August 25-27.

James H. Bishop, chairman of Thesuslta Davis Cup selection committee, said Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Paris, winner of the recent Wimledon singles championship, would have been a member of the team except for the injury he suffered at Newport yesterday.

Polly Riley Wins Western Medal With 1-Under 75

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Diminutive Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., today stroked a one-under-par 75 for medal honors in the qualifying round of the fiftieth Women's Western amateur golf meet.

Miss Riley finished a stroke ahead of 1948 champion Dot Kielty, Long Beach, Calif.. A 17-year-old high school sophomore from Toledo, Ohio, Barbara McIntire; veteran Marjorie Lindsay, Decatur, Ill., and Mae Murray, Ruthland, Vt., star making her Western debut, tied for third with 77s.

The defending champion, Helen Sigel of Philadelphia, was well off Miss Riley's qualifying pace with an 81.

Turkey Thicket, Powell in Finals

Turkey Thicket eliminated Powell, 4-2, yesterday and LaFayette eliminated Taft, 5-1, in the semi-finals of the D. C. Recreation Department neighborhood tennis tourney at Turkey Thicket.

Turkey Thicket and Powell will meet in the finals today at 1 p.m. at Turkey Thicket.

Miss Hobelmann Tops Field In District AAU Swim Tonight

A United States champion and two others who won points in the recent women's nationals at High Point, N. C., are among those competing for three District of Columbia AAU senior women's outdoor swimming championshps in the 10-event meet at Congressional Country Club pool tonight.

Barbara Hobelmann, 17-year-old Ambassador Club representative, who became Washington's first national titlist when she won the 1500-meter freestyle last week, tops the field seeking the D. C. AAU 220 freestyle crown.

Also competing is her teammate, Mary Freeman, winner of second and third-place medals at High Point, and Takoma Park's Bettie Roland, who finished third in the 300-meter individual medley. Miss Roland is defending the local title.

This trio also will appear with the Ambassador and Takoma relay teams in the 150-yard medley.

The other women's championship at stake is the lowboard diving, and the competition here should be keen with Gloria Dirr and Virginia Haggerty, former titlists from Takoma, and Ambassador's Maura Silverman, 1950 indoor champion, in the field.

In the men's highboard diving Irving Bridges will be defending. The chunky Ambassador specialist is shooting for surpremacy in this event for the sixth consecutive time. Among those opposing him are Paul Fite and Jay Lent and Bill Oliff of Takoma.

Four age-group events are on the program which opens at 7 o'clock.

FIRST OF THE FINE CARS IN VALUE

BIG MOMENT—with a Double Impact

It's a big moment when any new car rolls up to your door and you start out fresh and spanking bright.

Think, then, what it's going to mean when that new car is a ROADMASTER like this one pictured here.

You'll swing wide the door and slide into a car that's truly fine—and looks it.

You'll put foot to treadle and touch off the might of a great, 152-horsepower Fireball straight-eight that's ready to master any road—or anything it meets there.

You'll have the silken magic of Dynaflow Drive to simplify your driving, ease your way. A handsome flexible steering wheel, automatic windshield washers, soft Foamtex cushions, and many other items that are "extras" elsewhere are standard equipment here.

But even while you enjoy all that, you've a still deeper satisfaction enriching your pleasure.

For here you have not only a fine car, but a sound and frugal investment as well.

You have paid less per pound than any comparable car costs—and automotive men will tell you price per pound is the soundest measure there is of solid, thoroughgoing merit.

You've bought quality—top quality—all the fine things a fine car should provide. But you haven't spent a penny more than a fine car need cost.

And that can mean a lot. For instance—

Drop in on your Buick dealer. Try out a ROADMASTER. Match it, feature by feature and point by point, with any other fine car on the road.

Then get the price.

You may well find that you can get not only a new ROADMASTER for the sum you had in mind—but maybe a new fur coat for your wife as well!

Go-Ahead Signal Given Defense to Employ 100,000 More Workers

The Defense Department has been given the go-ahead to hire an additional 100,000 civilians before October 1. Its expansion also will continue after that date.

The department had a ceiling of 731,352 full-time civilian employes for the quarter that ended June 30. Owing to the Korean crisis and related problems, its ceiling for the quarter ending September 30 had to be revised several times. The ceiling has been fixed at 831,352.

Defense officials reveal that they have the authority to allocate the 100,000 jobs between the Army, Navy and Air Force. Army and Navy are expected to get about 35,000 each, and Air Force 25,000.

Between 3000 and 4000 of the jobs will be in and near this city. The bulk of the hiring will be in Navy yards, Army camps and arsenals, airfields and supply depots.

The Defense agencies have plans to hire a total of 236,000 new civilians under a huge supplemental budget bill that the House Appropriations Committee is drafting.

Meanwhile, first reports from Federal agencies on the President's directive of July 21 to slash nonessential spending are due today. The Army Engineers will volunteer to cut back river and harbor projects, although some of the public power projects probably will be speeded up. Public Housing Administration and Public Roads Administration also are due to be cut back.

Manganese Plant Sought

Interior Department will ask for funds to set up a small manganese ore plant on an experimental basis. Manganese is essential to the production of steel and nearly all we use is imported. Interior hopes its pilot plant will lead to the mining of manganese in this country.

I & N: Edward Ennis, a former Justice attorney who is practicing law here and in New York, and Argyle Mackey, a career employe, are both being considered for appointment as commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Mackey is acting commissioner.

OHE: The Office of the Housing Expediter is staging a comeback. The rent control agency is seeking the authority to recontrol rents in areas that have been decontrolled by States and local governments. It also wants the local option feature dropped in the present law. OHE, in addition, has started to strengthen ifs rent advisory boards in areas still under control.

JOB NEWS: Phone experts will be recruited late this month by the Civil Service Commission. The commission will announce examinations for four different types of phone jobs, paying from $3825 to $6400 to start. The jobs will be in the Rural Electrification Administration . . . Nearly 1500 applicants, including 925 here, will be examined next Monday for local police and firemen jobs . . . The Army's Adjutant General's Office is recalling about 400 employes who were laid off earlier this year.

STATUS: Only 17,300 of the 213,700 Federal employes here in the executive branch had war service or temporary status as of June 30. This is a postwar low. During World War II, two of every three workers were war service. A year ago there were 40,000 nonstatus people here in competitive jobs, and by January 1 the number had dipped to 30,000.

ORDER: The number will take another slump if the President, as expected, follows the Civil Service recommendation and orders all nonstatus people who have had a minimum of two years of service eligible for permanent status.

The proposed order has run into opposition of some veterans' groups, although thousands of veterans would benefit by it.

Those persons with the best case are veterans and nonveterans alike who have served Uncle Sam well for from two to eight years and who were recently laid off in the budget squeeze. They want to be included in the order. They have the sympathetic ear of the Civil Service Commission, but no acceptable plan to include them has been put forward.

In any event, its a good bet that the President will issue the covering order.

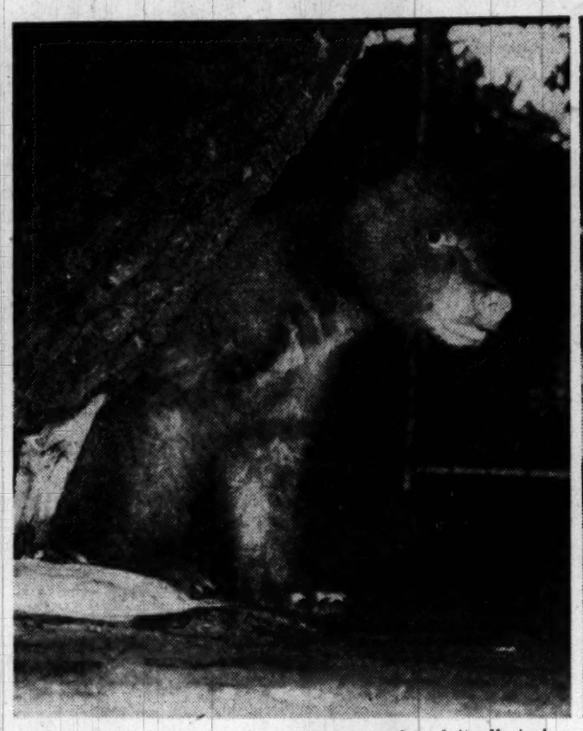
Something's Bruin as a Tale Makes Rounds of Bear Row

HOW IT STARTED—The trouble began when a couple of Spectacle Bears made just that of themselves by gossiping about Smokey, newest resident of Bear Row. One whispered to the other, and



SMOKEY, not knowing exactly what to make of it all, took what little refuge he could behind a handy tree. Here, he peeks out a bit to see if the others have heard the story, whatever it is

GENE, who arrived at the Zoo at about the same time as Smokey, but by different means, gives the Spectacle Bears the eye as he tries to find out what's going on up the line along Bear Row

NOSING in on it all is this red-blooded American Bear, who wants to get the bare facts, too

NOT TOO HAPPY about the tale (not his, the Spectacle Bears') is this Persian Bear

Elder Detwiler Again Heads Adventist Unit

Reelected President Of Potomac Group For Fifth Term

Elder Howard J. Detwiler yesterday was reelected president of the Potomac Conference, Seventh-Day Adventists, for his fifth two-year term.

The elder, who lives at 331 Flower ave., Takoma Park, was elected at a business session of the 10-day camp meeting of the Potomac Conference at Sligo Church, Flower and Carroll aves., Takoma Park.

The Potomac Conference represents approximately 60 churches in the District, Maryland and Virginia. Elder Detwiler was at one time president of the Columbia Union Conference.

Elder William H. Jones of 199 E. Ridge ave., Takoma Park, was reelected secretary-treasurer, and Elder Archer O. Dart, Riggs rd., Hyattsville, educational and Sabbath school secretary.

Elder Dart Makes Report

Other officers chosen were: Elder Warren N. Wittenberg, youth and home missionary secretary; C. H. Smith, publishing secretary, and E. S. Knecht, book and Bible House manager.

Elder Dart, in a report on the educational and Sabbath school department, spoke of "child obedience," and defined obedience as "love in action."

"In this day of atomic bombs, political and social unrest and insecurity, we should give more thought toward helping our children to be emotionally stable," he said.

"Our homes and schools are truly havens of refuge. They help us to center our affections on God and out attention in Heaven. No wonder we can claim the promise of God for perfect peace of mind," said Elder Dart.

Three new schools have been established in the conference during the past biennial term, and there have been major improvements in 11 other schools, it was brought out in the report.

Cost per elementary pupil in the conference was $90.60, Elder Dart said, compared to the estimated cost of $214.75 per pupil in the Columbia Union Conference, which embraces the Middle Atlantic States.

School conditions were equal to those of public schools, he said, except for lower teachers' salaries.

A feature of the morning service was an address by Dr. John Jacques, Seventh-Day Adventist preacher and physician, who was exiled to Siberia by the Russians during World War I.

Miss Mary Welsh, Bible instructor for the Columbia Union Conference, Elder H. E. Kotz, missionary from Africa, and Elder Robert L. Boothby, conference evangelist, will speak today.

Boys Charged With Popping Store Panes

The sharp, popping noises heard in Harold's Liquor Store, 3100 Mount Pleasant st. nw., about 3 p. m. yesterday turned out to be more serious than Manager Ed Taylor thought at first.

Busy with customers, Taylor, for the moment disregarded the first salvo as the uncorking of champagne or whisky bottles.

The second "pops" called for investigation. Taylor called police.

Police arrested two BB-gun-toting boys—10 and 15 years old—and charged them with destroying private property. Juvenile papers made out, the boys were released in the custody of their parents.

Harold Katz, owner of the store, said the boys' marksmanship—at a distance of about 100 yards—broke four plateglass windows.

He estimated damage at $500.

Arlington Buys $300,000 Plant For Schools

The Arlington School Board yesterday purchased for $299,750 at public auction the 3-story building at 1426 N. Quincy st. built three years ago by the Arlington Warehouse Corp.

The building, adjacent to Washington-Lee High School, will be used for additional vocational training shops for the high school, for central administrative offices for county school system, and for a school repair shop and central storage of equipment and supplies.

A portion of the building eventually will be used for a central kitchen to provide hot lunches for the elementary schools in the county.

The building, 120x125 feet in size, contains 14,400 square feet of space on each of its three floors.

Sold to Satisfy Trust

It was advertised for sale to satisfy a trust of $150,759 held against it by William Montgomery and C. B. Hurd, representing the Acacia Life Insurance Co. Bidding at the forenoon auction on the premises started at $275,000 and rose to $299,600 before the school board's bid was accepted.

The school board will take possession of the property immediately and will make final settlement within 15 days.

Four tenants at present hold leases, paying a total rental of $2900 a month. They are the Sunfreeze Frozen Food Co., Air Industries, Inc., Edward Boker, Inc., and Hollinger Corp., and they will continue to occupy their space for the present.

Supt. William A. Early, explaining why the board purchased the building, said, "We are in urgent need of more vocational shop space. We were unable last year to provide shop training to half the boys who applied for it because of lack of space. We expect to put at least four shops into the building.

Needed Offices

"Adequate administrative offices are needed, too," he said. "We pay $350 per month rental for the former residence at 2732 Wilson blvd. where the school offices are now housed. Space there is limited and the building is not well suited to office use."

Early said the building will also "provide excellent storage space for equipment and supplies" and "make possible more economical quantity buying of many items needed in our 650 classrooms."

Members of the school board, discussing eventual use of part of the building for the school lunch program, pointed out that the county-wide program is one of the objectives set forth by the present board before its election.

Bare Fact: Bears Weren't Born To Be Cuddled by Us Bipeds

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The brevity of a bear's tail may or may not be because he sits on it so often.

It is definite, though, in this connection, that no one, with the possible exception of a candidate for Alcoholics Anonymous, ever saw a bear with a tail like a python or peacock.

This and other bare facts and observations are compounded from an investigation of the family Ursidae at the Zoo here.

There bears may be observed daily sitting on their tails, accepting peanuts from, or waving encouragingly to, the sweltering bipeds on the other side of the bars.

The bars are not to keep the furless, featherless bipeds out of the bathtubs that feature the cages along Bear Row. The bars are to keep people from getting too pally with the cuddly looking fellows (who may weigh 600 pounds).

"They all look sweet and nice," Dr. William M. Mann says sternly, "but they are not to be petted."

Bosses 40 of 'Em

Dr. Mann, as director of the Zoo, is boss—if boss is the word for someone in charge of critters which may perversely take a swipe that can cost a man his life—of about 40 bears.

For this collection, representing a baker's dozen varieties, they bake a special bread each day. For those who have a little bear at home, the ingredients are 60 percent bran and 40 percent wheat; it is raised with yeast and looks as brown as a cinnamon bear. At the Zoo they make 300 pounds daily, but the bears don't get all of it. The monkeys and birds get some.

An encyclopedia consulted says flatly that bears, which have five toes and "large, nonretractile claws," are particularly fond of honey. This is a matter of personal taste with the bears at the Zoo, Dr. Mann says. Honey is not on the menu, but a friend of the director's once brought some of the sweet stuff out. Some of the bears relished it, but others turned their noses up.

Perhaps because of Washington's balmy clime, or the exposure to civilization, the bears at the Zoo semihibernate in the winter. They don't take the long beauty rests they do in Alaska. For that matter, the European bears practically hibernate in their caves every day after feeding.

In this connection, there is the story of a GI sentry walking his beat in the Vosges during the winter of 1945, who was tapped on the shoulder and thinking it was his parka-clad sergeant relieving him, handed over his carbine and went back to his foxhole to sleep. When the irate sergeant wakened him hours later they went back and saw the bear walking the post in a military manner. If this isn't a bearfaced fish story from Alsace, the bear was not hibernating.

Rough and Nasty

First bear along Bear Row is a Brown Alaska with a two-toned coat that killed his mate some here ago. He was born about March, 1946, but he is already a big hunk of meat and fur.

His next door neighbor is Snowball, a polar bear with a seaweed-green tinge, like a mermaid, along the spine. Snowball is afraid of iron bars, perhaps because of having been disciplined with one before coming to the Zoo in 1942, but will take a shovel or rake away from a man before you can say "bruin," according to James F. Kilby, principal keeper.

Third cage along Bear Row is devoted to the sleepy European branch of the Ursidae family, a female of which—born in 1906—produced 26 cubs at the Zoo between 1911 and 1927.

The hybrids, in the next cage, had a polar bear for a father and an Alaskan brown bear for a mother—an unusual parentage—and were born at the Zoo. Great for posing, they are very popular with the visitors.

Then there is the brown, cream and black Sitka; the Alaska Peninsula, one of eight species of the big brown bear, and the Kodiak, Old Vic. He is about 30 years old and eldest of the bears present.

Three young grizzlies are also in the Zoo's collections, and they're "wild as reindeer," according to the staff.

Also represented: the rare spectacled bear, found in the Andes from Bolivia to Venezuela and taking their name from their facial markings; the sloth bear, sometimes called the honey bear and a favorite with the Indian jugglers; the Syrian, the Malayan, and, of course, the cinnamon.

Smokey Is Youngest

Smokey, youngest (four months) bear at the Zoo, is a cinnamon. Smokey, who suffered third-degree burns in a New Mexico forest fire, has just come to town to enchant streams of visitors.

His only competitor is Gene (the name comes from "genetics"), who was born about the same time. Gene's parents are hybrid bears, who aren't expected to be parents anymore than mules are.

Not represented in the Zoo's collection are stock market bears, teddy bears, nor—regretfully—the Russian bear, of which Kipling said:

"Make ye no truce with Adam-zad—the Bear that walks like a Man!"

Truman Veto Stops Bid for Citizenship

President Truman yesterday vetoed a bill which would have given citizenship to a 32-year-old Danish national who worked here for a year as a section manager in Lansburgh and Bro. department store.

He is John Michael Ancker Rasmussen, once of 1509 16th st. nw. and now employed by a New York city department store.

The President said he was vetoing the bill because "the record fails to present considerations justifying the enactment of special legislation granting him a preference over others."

Rasmussen entered this country in July, 1948, from China, where he had lived since the age of one.

The President said that the quota of Denmark to which Rasmussen is chargeable "is oversubscribed and an immigration visa in his case is not readily obtainable."

"In this respect his case is not unlike those of many other aliens who are awaiting an opportunity to come to this country for permanent residence," the President said, adding that the legislation would "undoubtedly encourage other aliens to attempt to enter the United States as visitors for a temporary period and, thereafter, seek exemption from the requirement of the immigration laws."

Traffic Tips

2. Don't drive when drinking or drink when driving. Also don't drive when tired out. Your brain rings like lead instead of like steel when your system is tarnished with ardent spirits or with the toxins of fatigue. Your nerve and leg reactions are slower.

If you get drowsy, or exhausted, pull off the road, in a safe place, lower the windows to get fresh air, and take a nap. You and others will be safer instead of sorrier.

Tip No. 3 Wednesday

Dr. Peckham Indicted on Abortion Count

Liquor Dealers Accused of Failing To Report Big Sale

Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., was charged yesterday in a District grand jury two-count indictment with performing an abortion operation on a 30-year-old stenographer.

The 44-year-old physician, who in 1948 was acquitted of two similar charges, was accused in the indictment of using either a drug or instrument on the woman to cause a miscarriage.

The operation was first attempted on July 24, with additional treatment given a day later at Dr. Peckham's office, 428 8th st. se., according to the indictment.

The woman, who is unmarried, was taken to Gallinger Hospital and gave a statement to police implicating Dr. Peckham.

Liquor Dealers Indicted

In another indictment, Hyman J. Minkoff and Leo P. Minkoff, trading as the Acme Liquor Supply Co., 1400 North Capitol st., were accused of failing to report the sale of more than 81 gallons of whisky to a Greensboro, N. C., resident in 1947.

The whisky was taken to North Carolina for resale in "dry" counties, according to Federal authorities.

Also, the Minkoff brothers were charged with making two other false entries in 1949 concerning the sale of liquor in wholesale lots.

Teen-Age Couple Charged

A teen-age couple, formerly of Washington, was charged with counterfeiting $5, $10, and $20 bills here and with illegal possession of the zinc plate used to make counterfeit money.

They are William H. Zoerndt, 18, and his wife, Helen T. Zoerndt, 17, who formerly resided here at 1363 A st. ne.

John W. P. Graham, 37, of Philadelphia, was charged with falsifying a job application with the Department of the Army. According to the indictment, he failed to state he had once been charged with indecent assault, attempted rape, and enticing a minor for immoral purposes.

Also, he did not divulge that he had been discharged from one job for general irresponsibility, and from another for immoral conduct, the true bill states. In addition, he failed to state that he had been arrested in England decent liberties with a young girl, deecnt liberties with a young girl, it was charged.

Indicted for alleged operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips:

Joshua C. Foucha, 50, 816 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Adelaide Foucha, 42, 816 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Beatrice Belt, 36, 416 New York ave. nw.; Robert A. Smith, 62, of 634 O st. nw., Helen D. Reed, 50, of 41 Massachusetts ave. nw.; and Wilhelmina Porter, 20, of 320 6th st. ne.; Robert C. Thorpe, 45, of 609 New Jersey ave. nw.; Annis Wyche, 40, of 15 Quincy pl. nw.; Andrew Bell, 33, of 420 W st. nw.; Lemuel Felder, 29, of 806 Eades st. ne., and Jack Johnson, 39, of 1121 S. Carolina ave. se.

Two Tries to No Avail, Safe Solid, Yeggs Fail

Safecrackers failed, for the second time in a month, to burn open the 400-pound office safe at the Calvert Motors, Inc., 1141 East-West Highway, Silver Spring, Md., it was learned yesterday.

The would-be yeggs entered the building through a side window and wheeled a large acetylene welding torch to the safe.

The attempted robbery was discovered by Theodore Williams, service manager, when he opened up yesterday. Soft drinks and a cigarette vending machines were the only things the yeggs broke into the first time. The safe withstood their efforts that time, too.

House Raked For Making D. C. Citizens 'Super Goats'

Granger Deplores 'Push-Around' on Home Rule, Cites Cost to Congress

House inaction on home rule is making "super-duper goats" out of the residents of the District, Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah) charged yesterday.

He told the House the time has come for leaders of both parties to show whether the platform pledges for home rule were sincere, or "whether we are playing cops and robbers with the District."

Granger's appeal for enactment of the home rule bill was echoed by one of its leading sponsors, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.).

The Senate has passed the home rule bill. It is stuck now in the House District Committe while sponsors keep seeking direct action. Vehicle for direct action is a petition to take the bill away from the District Committee. Of 218 signatures needed to force action, 204 have been placed on the petition.

Goat Bill Deferred

Granger's goat reference stemmed from a bill about goats. One was before the House yesterday. It would empower the District Commissioners to regulate the keeping and running at large of goats. It was deferred.

Two other District bills approved and sent to the Senate call for (1) posting of prices in barber shops and (2) exemption of the YMCA from payment of taxes estimated by District Assessor Edward A. Dent at $30,000 a year. House District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), pointed out the YMCA had not been required to pay the taxes until this year when a legal question was raised about the exemption, and the assessment was made, with the first installment payable next month.

After District Day proceedings, Granger told the House it costs about $80,000 a day to run the Congress. At the rate of two District days a month, he calculated the annual expense of handling District bills, like those dealing with goats, at close to two million dollars a year.

Goats In General

"Now the people who are the goats in general are the 150,000,000 people of the country who are paying the taxes for these deliberations," said Granger.

"The super-duper goats are the people who live in the District who are being pushed around by this Congress."

He said the pushing around comes from Congress telling District residents what kind of legislation they will have, and "how their lives will be determined."

Representative Norris Poulson (R., Calif.) took up the goat theme to say he is all for home rule, and all against having Democrats try to make scapegoats of Republicans on Korean policy. He said he thought his comments would get the goat of some Democrats.

They did.

Representative Walter B. Huber (D., Ohio) retorted that while the House was on the subject of goats "the only progressive members the Republican Party has had in the last generation were the Sons of the Wild Jackasses." The phrase was applied by the late Senator George Moses (R., N. H.) to members of a southern and midwestern farm coalition.

3 Alexandria Firemen Overcome by Smoke

Three Alexandria firemen were overcome by smoke yesterday when fighting a blaze in the home of John R. Sweeney, 302 E. Windsor ave., Alexandria.

The fire damaged the upper story of the frame dwelling. Treated for smoke inhalation were No. 3 Station Capt. C. J. Huppman, and Firemen P. S. Harrington and W. C. Beck.

41 New Polio Cases In Va. On Weekend

Seven New Ones

Polio Cases In D. C. Area Rise to 146

Seven new polio cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, bringing the area total this year to 146.

Four of the newly reported cases were in Washington, bringing the total to 69 for 1950, as compared with 24 for the same period of last year. The three other cases were in nearby northern Virginia.

District cases are a 20-month-old boy from the 4700 block of Washington pl. ne., in Children's Hospital; a 31-year-old woman from the 600 block of Morton pl. ne., a 12-year-old girl from the 400 block of Elm st. nw., and an 8-year-old boy from the unit block of N st. ne., all in Gallinger Hospital.

In Fairfax, a 23-year-old woman from the 800 block of Richmond hwy. is in Gallinger Hospital, the 22d county case reported this year.

In Arlington, a 6-year-old child from the 1700 block of N. Troy st. is in Children's Hospital, the county's twelfth case this year.

Polio cases reported for nearby Maryland this year are 21 for Prince Georges County and 17 for Montgomery County.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—The biggest polio weekend on record in Virginia brought reports of 41 new cases since Friday into the State Health Department today.

New cases were reported from Buchanan, Grayson, Montgomery, Smyth, Tazewell, Washington and Wythe counties as the disease continued to spread over the southwest.

Wythe reported six new cases bringing the county total to 152 cases. Only one new case was from Wytheville.

Roanoke's memorial and crippled children's hospital reported 17 cases were admitted Saturday and Sunday for a total of 74 patients.

Richmond city had a new case.

The total brought the State toll to date to 404 cases. compared to 235 at the same time in 1944, the previous high polio year.

First cases were reported from Buckingham and Rockbridge counties, but one case on the Health Department rolls from Mathews county was crossed off after rediagnosis.

In Smyth county, the rich Valley Fair Association announced that its annual fair, scheduled for August 24-25, had been cancelled this year because of the outbreak.

Dr. A. S. McCown, director of the State Bureau of Communicable Disease Control, had one bright spot of news.

He said if you are an adult the chances are you are immune to polio by now. Most adults, he said, have probably had "sub-clinical" infantile paralysis.

Deaths Reported

The following deaths were reported yesterday by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the District Health Department (figures in parentheses is date of death):

Giles Pitt, 87 (12).
Bridget Dwyer, 85 (12).
Henrietta Silverburg, 83 (13).

Cop With Setter 'Setting' Around Seeking Owner

Are you missing an Irish setter named "Miss Patsy"?

The Fredericksburg police would like to know, particularly Officer W. R. Robey (Fredericksburg 375J1), who has been caring for such a dog since July 14.

Officer Robey said the dog, about 1½ years old, was found in a car when two youths were picked up on a traffic violation. The youths told him the dog hopped aboard in the 500 block of N. Randolph st., Arlington.

Mrs. W. J. Hayes of the Alexandria Animal Welfare League is trying to find the animal's owner.

Arlington to Ask Sewer Bond Vote

Saves Time, Too

Drivers' Fines New Revenue At Greenbelt

The Greenbelt city council last night passed an ordinance permitting traffic violators to pay their fines to the city treasurer rather than go to court in Hyattsville.

This, proponents of the plan said, would bring revenue to the city and save the time of policemen who now have to go to Hyattsville to testify.

In another action, the council named three officers in the armed forces to serve as a committee with Greenbelt's civilian defense chief, George Panagoulis, in drawing up a disaster plan. They are: Major Lyman Woodman, who suggested the action, Lieut. Col. Adelbert Long, and Lieut. James Horton.

Sam Ashelman, general manager of the Greenbelt Consumer Service, urged the council to discontinue the personnel property tax paid by it, in return for which the Greenbelt Consumer Service would remove its own trash, a task now performed at city expense. The council, which had previously turned down the proposal, decided not to consider it again at this time.

The council delayed action on the proposal to associate Greenbelt with the county library system.

Arlington's County Board voted last night to petition the County Circuit Court "within the next six months" for a referendum on a bond issue—probably $2,617,000—to expand present county sewage facilities.

The board did not set a specific bond figure, but county officials have estimated it will cost the $2,617,000 total to expand the county's present sewage treatment plant, finance two new pumping stations and new trunk lines.

It is mandatory for the Circuit Court to hold the referendum, once the County Board has petitioned for it.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg will take last night's resolution with him to Richmond today and present it to the Virginia State Water Control Board, at a meeting set for 11 a. m. (DST).

The State body has ordered Arlington to produce its program for relieving pollution of the Potomac River by today.

Arlington now treats 5.5 million gallons of sewage daily and dumps an estimated 6 million gallons more into the Potomac, untreated.

The suggested $2,617,000 expansion would allow the treatment plant to handle a daily sewage capacity of 20 million gallons.

Board members did not decide whether bonds issued to pay for the expansion would be self-liquidating "revenue" bonds—paid for out of increased sewage charges—or whether they would be paid for from general county revenue.

At the meeting, Paul Peters, a member of the Arlington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, called Potomac pollution "a shame and a disgrace" and urged expanded treatment facilities.

The board also appointed five persons to its Advisory Committee on County Government Organization and Procedures to survey the government and recomend changes. They are Gustav A. Moe and Howard Gammon, both Bureau of the Budget employes; Mrs. Kathryn Stone, former national vice president of the League of Women Voters; William Winston, a Riggs National Bank official, and Mrs. Mary Chace, a certified public accountant.

Next Tuesday night the board will meet to discuss acquisition of the Clarendon Fire House at 1006 N. Hudson st., now owned by the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department.

2 Road Workers Are Charged In Fence Deaths

Frederick, Md., Aug. 14 (AP)—A farmer and a livestock dealer were electrocuted 12 days ago on a barber wire fence and two construction men today were charged with manslaughter in connection with the accident.

The men charged were Joseph Parks, about 50, general foreman for Ehrhardt and May, Inc., of Baltimore, and Carl W. Seifert, about 45, an explosives expert also from Baltimore.

The victims were Merton B. Gorsuch, 23, a farmer living near Unionville, and John D. Wilt, 47, livestock dealer.

Wilt went to the Gorsuch farm August 2 to see about buying a cow. The two men set out across the fields to look at the animal. Gorsuch apparently was electrocuted when he stepped over a single-strand barbed wire livestock fence. Wilt died trying to the livestock dealer.

Howard W. Smith Spends $1838 In Primary Run

Richmond, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Representaitve Howard W. Smith of Alexandria formally filed today his notice of candidacy for reelection in the November general election on November 7 with the State Board of Elections.

Smith, ranking member of the Virginia delegation, was renominated in the August Democratic primary.

The Eighth District Congressman also filed today his expense account, which showed disbursements aggregating $1838.18 in the primary contest, in which he was opposed by Arthur Souther of Arlington.

Security Program Up This Week

By the United Press

President Truman's legislative program to control Communists and other potential spies and saboteurs in this country will be introduced in Congress this week, Administration spokesmen said yesterday.

They said the plan, which is certain to run into stiff Republican opposition, is being worked out in meetings at the Justice Department.

No details of the proposals were given. But Mr. Truman asked Congress last week to approve a five-point program that would tighten the Nation's internal se-

Three Men Charged in Safecracking

Three men—one the father of a Washington policeman — were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny.

The case, involving a safecracking, was continued until September 6 to permit the men to obtain attorneys.

Lawrence set $3000 bond for Wyatt J. Roy, sr., 46, of 420 Morris rd. se., father of Pvt. Wyatt J. Roy, jr., of the Eleventh Precinct.

Bond was set at $5000 for the other two suspects, Jeff Burke, 34, of 1865 California st. nw., and James M. Johnson, 32, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The three were arrested at 6 a. m. Sunday in woods just off Palmer hwy. and Landover rd. Seat Pleasant, Md. Prince Georges County Pvts. David Dudley and Charles N. Weaver made the arrests—guns drawn — when they noticed a car said Johnson was owner of the auto.

Near the car, police said they found a safe stolen Saturday night from the home of Daniel Rodriquez, 721 Howard rd. se.

Also found nearby, police said, were four watches. The car, they reported, contained a dial and plate from a safe and a quantity of tools, including drill punches, a crowbar and jimmybar.

The three suspects waived extradition from Maryland, police said, and were questioned by the Washington safe squad.

Sandra Stahl, Pentagon Typist, Wins Miss Washington Title

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

A 21-year-old Pentagon typist last night won the title of "Miss Washington" with a song, a face, a figure and a personality.

Sandra Stahl of 1633 16th st. nw., who works for Air Force Intelligence, is the girl who charmed 14 judges, from the Treasurer of the United States to advertising men, into giving her the crown.

Her birdlike coloratura soprano —she sang the Bell Song from Lakme, her favorite — brought cheers from 3000 persons at the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater in Rock Creek Park.

Runner-up in the beauty-talent-personality contest was Shirley Talbott, also 21, of 115 Rittenhouse st. nw., who along with her pulchritude, acted her way to the second spot.

The new "Miss Washington," calm throughout the two-hour show, said with a dazzling winning smile she would "put everything I can toward a music career." A one-year $500 college scholarship is one of the "Miss Washington" prizes.

A Californian from Long Beach, Sandra is a 5-foot-6, green-eyed blonde with eight years of voice training. She hopes to have an operatic career.

She has been in Washington about a year and thinks the climate is too sticky—but last night, dressed in a blue strapless chiffon evening gown for the talent and personality part of the contest, and in a bathing suit for the beauty part of it, she was downright chilly, along with the other 11 contestants.

Miss Talbott acted a poignant scene from Thornton Wilder's Our Town, in which a girl from a small town in New Hampshire comes back for a few minutes after her death, but cannot stay.

She is a drama student at Catholic University and a native of Washington. Five foot-seven, she has dark brown hair and blue eyes. A graduate of Coolidge High School, she has studied ballet, modeling and the violin, besides dramatics.

Because her hobby is painting, several of her pictures were brought out last night and studied by the judges as further evidence of her talent.

Judges included Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States; Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) and Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) chairman respectively of the Senate and House District Committees; Howard C. Drake, director of the Washington Board of Trade; Arthur H. Johnson, president of the Lions Club; William F. Sigmund, president of the Washington Advertising Club; William F. Nelson, president of the Washington Building Congress; L. E. Field, president of the Washington Touchdown Club; Arnold Fine, Washington Daily News, and Milton S. Kronheim, Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc.

Miss Stahl, who was crowned by last year's Miss Washington, Mary Jane Hayes, first thanked pianist Fred Woolston, whom she described as the "finest pianist I have ever worked with."

Woolston accompanied the four songstress contestants and played appropriate bits for the four who acted dramatic scenes and the four who danced in the talent contest.

The show was opened by Willis Conover of WWDC, which produced the program. Milton Q. Ford was master of ceremonies. Guest talent included the D. C. Keys, barber shop quartette, and Miss Janet Cassell in a comedy song with zither. Mary Jane Hayes The beauty-talent contest, which played a piano solo.

was sponsored by the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce, brings $5000 in prizes to Miss Stahl, as well as a chance to compete for the Miss America title at Atlantic City September 4 to 9.

F. H. Stephens, Ex-Corporation Counsel, Dies

Francis H. Stephens, 86, former D. C. Corporation Counsel and an expert on municipal law and taxation, died in Garfield Hospital yesterday after a short illness.

Mr. Stephens

Mr. Stephens, who lived at 1714 Summit pl. nw., was a native of Sandusky, Ohio. He received his academic and law degrees at George Washington University and was appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel in 1903.

Mr. Stephens, who lived at 1714 Summit pl. nw., was a native of Sandusky, Ohio. He received his academic and law degrees at George Washington University and was appointed assistant Corporation Counsel in 1903.

He was named corporation counsel in 1920, a position he held for seven years. From then until his retirement, he continued to serve as assistant corporation counsel.

His retirement, at the age of 70, was compulsory in 1934. From then until his death, Mr. Stephens continued in the practice of law here.

Mr. Stephens represented the District Board of Education when it fought for abolition of high school fraternities here, first in the District Court and later in the Supreme Court for the District of Columbia. He also was general counsel for the Public Utilities Commission during the initial stages of its operation.

During World War I he served on the draft board and was active in home defense.

He is survived by two sons, Francis D. and Allen Carroll, and a daughter, Mrs. Dorothea S. Sinclair.

Funeral services will be held at Gawlers Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., at 11 a.m. Wednesday with burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

The following will represent the District Bar Association at the funeral: District Court Judge Richmond B. Keech, Municipal Court Chief Judge George P. Barse, Stanley De Neale, W.Gwynn Gardiner, Ringgold Hart, Francis W. Hill, jr., Robert E. Lynch, Joseph C. McGarraghy, T. Gillespie Walsh, Vernon E. West, H. Winship Wheatley and James C. Wilkes.

Brig. Gen. Travis Buried at Arlington

Brig. Gen. Robert F. Travis, 45, who died eight days ago in the crash of a B-29 Superfort in California, was buried yesterday with full military honors at Arlington Cemetery.

An honor guard and an Army band led some 200 troops escorting the casket from Fort Myer chapel to the graveside.

General Travis was commander of the Ninth Strategic Reconnaissance Wing at the Fairfield-Suisun base where the crash occurred. He was a native of Savannah, Ga.

4-Year-Old Girl Hurt By Auto Passing Home

Four-year-old Eileen Johnson was seriously injured yesterday when she darted across the street in front of her home at 1745 Seaton st. nw. and was struck by a passing auto about 1 p. m.

She was taken to Children's Hospital with a fractured skull and multiple cuts and bruises. Police said the driver of the car was Edward E. Kirby, 60, of 1520 T st. nw. No charges were placed against him. Eileen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ermine Johnson, Children's Hospital said.

Appeals Court Backs Conviction Of 'Little Joe' Scheve Trio

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the gaming conviction of Theodore J. (Little Joe) Scheve, 30, and two codefendants, each sentenced to serve from one to three years in prison.

Scheve, Herman (The Judge) Kadan, 46, and Hyman Rosen, 40, were convicted of operating a big-money dice game at 2730 Woodley pl. nw. Also convicted was Little Joe's father, Joseph H. (Big Joe) Scheve, who was fatally shot in a poolhall before the appeal was heard.

They protested that they were prejudiced in the trial in that their cases were heard along with that of Big Joe, who was also accused —and convicted—of pistol whipping an embittered patron of the dice den.

In affirming, the Appeals Court pointed out that when he was arguing for a new trial in District Court, the trio's lawyer said:

"I think it is fair for your honor to consider that they did not at any time, under oath, commit perjury to mislead you, that there was no gambling on those premises."

This led Appeals Court Judge Henry W. Edgerton to say, "Since appellants' guilt of the only crime of which they were accused was so clear that no defense was attempted and none would have been attempted if they had been tried separately, the court's refusal to try them separately could hardly be prejudicial."

He then quoted the Government's brief which said:

"The gambling offense, a continuous one, was committed on the same day, but a few hours prior to the assault. Both offenses were committed at the same address on premises controlled by the appellants. The victim of the assault was also a victim of the gambling operations . . . The assault was directly occasioned by and grew out of the gambling offense."

41 Graduated From Police Rookie School

The Metropolitan Police rookie school yesterday graduated 41 new policemen to duty.

The force's latest additions bring the department's strength to 1930. Twelve more men are on military leave.

With the department's strength authorized at 1983 under the current budget, the force has 41 vacancies.

Inspector Clarence Lutz, in charge of the police training program, said he hoped a new rookie school would start by September 1. Recruiting is now going on.

Lutz said the department is particularly interested in obtaining candidates from the District itself since Washington men know the city better than nearby residents.

The department, he said, is also making plans for the additional men that would be needed under the five-day police week. The bill providing the five-day schedule is now on President Truman's desk.

Store President Given Traffic Safety Award

George E. Kenelpp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, yesterday presented a traffic safety certificate to Woodward & Lothrop for "conspicuous achievement in accident prevention."

The award was given by Liberty Mutual Insurance Co., the department store's insurance carrier. It was given in recognition of a 31 percent reduction in the frequency of accidents during the year ended May 1, 1950.

The award was accepted by Andrew Parker, Woodward & Lothrop president, in the store's service building, 131 M st. se. Present were other store officials and drivers of its 65 trucks and 15 other vehicles.

Everette Neal Dies; Lived Here 37 Years

Funeral services for Everette E. Neal, 53, an auditor with the Income Tax Division, Bureau of Internal Revenue, who died unexpectedly Sunday night, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the W. W. Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw. Burial will be in Georgetown, Ohio.

Mr. Neal, who lived at 5509 8th st. nw., was a native of Bethel, Ohio. He had lived in Washington about 37 years.

During World War I he served in the Army, and was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Estelle P. Neal; two sons, Willard E. and Richard G. Neal, and a grandson, Clifford K. Neal, all of Washington.

Detective's Shot May Have Killed Boat Row Suspect

Leroy R. Davis, 37, address unknown, whose body was found in the Washington channel yesterday, may have been shot by Det. Sergt. Lloyd Furr who was investigating a shooting-stabbing altercation Saturday night aboard the excursion steamer Robert E. Lee.

When the "Lee" docked at 8th and O sts. sw, police, informed that one man had been shot and two stabbed, were waiting for a Leroy Davis, whom witnesses identified as the suspect.

When Furr saw a man climbing over the rail, he ordered him to stop. As the man jumped into the water, Furr fired twice. The suspect disappeared. The body was found under a dock at Maine ave. and O st. sw. An autopsy showed death was caused by a bullet through the temple. Furr was put in the custody of Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty.

U. S. Women Face Big Role in Nation's Defense

Bureau Head Outlines Dual Need in Home and Industry

By Norma Lanum

AMERICAN WOMEN must carry the brunt of disaster work in the event this country is bombed, they must contribute strongly to vital production plants, and they must maintain a sizeable strength in the armed services. But at the same time their most important job is at home taking care of the family.

This comes straight from Miss Frieda Miller, whose job as director of the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department makes her a consultant on emergency mobilization programs.

Since women make up the only large labor reservoir, they'll be in constant demand in any future emergency, Miss Miller says, "But a mobilized economy must recognize and make provision for their other essential contributions to the life of the Nation."

Which is just another way of saying motherhood still outranks war.

Eager to Do Their Part

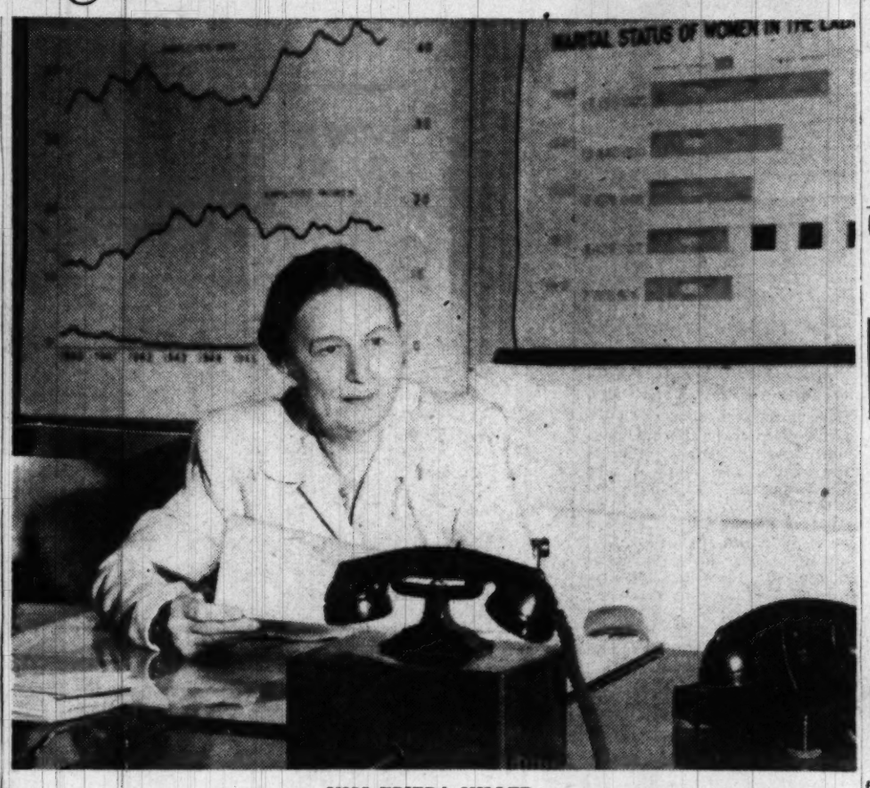
ALREADY Miss Miller is taking steps to lift "Men Only" restrictions from defense plant assembly lines. And early indications are that the girls won't have to be lured in. They're eager to go.

Typical of the letters from all sections of the country that cross Miss Miller's desk is one from an Oakland, Calif., woman. She asks, "Are we to be banned from defense work in this war?"

The writer had recently returned to the plant where she worked as an electrician during World War II to find that women no longer were allowed to do the same work.

This California worker, as well as many others throughout the country, is anxious to "step back where we left off and try to do our part."

But the women whose family responsibilities keep them home most of the time may take vital jobs in a volunteer corps for emergency action in the event of air raids.



MISS FRIEDA MILLER
. . . women's defense role is vital one

Jobs Will Fit Housewives' Hours

THOUSANDS of volunteers will be needed as soon as local civilian defense programs are completed, Miss Miller says. And there's bound to be a job to fit any number of hours the housewife can spare.

Women with a number of young children may merely contribute clothing for emergency packages which their neighbors with more free time will assemble and store.

Or maybe the busy mother could merely volunteer to supply kettles of steaming water for sterilizing surgical instruments in case of bombing.

All these small but essential jobs must be coordinated within neighborhood groups for the quickest possible action, says the labor official.

But it's essential that United States women understand the dangers of bombing and the methods of coping with its disasters.

"We may be bombed just once," she says. "Maybe never, or maybe quite often."

Local Governments Hold the Reins

NOT AN alarmist by nature, Miss Miller is anxious that the American women are organized before the possible bombings just as the British women were before their cities were blitzed by the Nazi during the last war.

Such organization of volunteers will have to come from the local governments. But the best possible civil defense, according to Miss Miller, is one that employs a large corps of volunteer women.

Miss Miller still has vivid memories of the cool-headed efficiency and bravery of the members of the Women Volunteer Services in London. She was there in 1943 and '44 as assistant to United States Ambassador Winant.

A small blue-eyed woman, with straight grey hair knotted on the back of her head, Miss Miller is one of this country's outstanding women labor authorities.

Man and Wife Devotedly Shelter His Niece While She Does Post-Graduate Work; Man Is Concerned To Counteract Her Home Training in Stinginess

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My niece, who graduated from college in 1949, has been staying with us for the past year. She will finish her post-graduate work in about three months and then go home. She lived at home during her college years.

My wife and I have a daughter, and our niece—my sister's child—shares a room with her. We have been as kind and considerate as is possible to be, and since she has been here she has developed wonderfully, socially. She is 22, very pretty and has a nice manner; but unfortunately her good points are almost entirely cancelled by a monstrous selfishness.

Betty is miserly about money, greedy about food and completely self centered. Her selfishness is deep seated and stems in large part from her home environment. She got completely warped training regarding thrift, with the result that it is a fault, not a virtue, in her. And like all selfish people, she rationalizes her fault. She believes that kindness which involves generosity is an evidence of weakness.

The child has many good qualities. With kindly consideration for others added, she would be a fine person. She has never had a close friend and is often very unhappy; and she doesn't realize that her selfishness alienates people quickly. I am ashamed that my sister allowed the child's character to develop this way, and I believe I have a responsibility to help her if possible. Can you suggest any literature that might guide her to a normal viewpoint on material things? P. J.

Girl's Behavior Traced to Fear

DEAR P. J.: Betty's selfishness stems from ingrained anxieties acquired from her mother. Offensive greed and defensive stinginess are outward and visible symptoms of latent fixated fear so intensely felt that it blocks the development of a balanced repertory of constructive practices. This truism is just as true in the life of belligerent nations and the records of so-called ruthless politicians, financiers, etc., as it is true of your niece, for instance.

What is this fear? In its natural essence, it is instinctive fear of annihilation at the hands of forces that lurk outside the circle of one's "control." It is part of the physical legacy of just being alive. It is a feeling indigenous to being alive. It tends to prolong healthy aliveness by imparting alertness and caution to exploratory behavior in the field of new experiments.—qualities as "true" to protoplasm as to the matured human being.

In the so-called higher forms of life, this instinctive fear is modified and kept within healthy bounds if good protective care begins at birth. Such care imparts to the new life a physical realization that outside protective forces do exist, in comforting measure. Thus reassured, the new life expands to include a sense of significance, a zestful strength, and a growing competence that counterbalance the intrinsic fear-feeling.

Human Security Lies in Fellowship

IN THE human personality, other positive attitudes begot by deeply reassuring early treatment include: 1. Basic assumption that, basically, all's well with oneself and God's universe. 2. Faith that good influences work actively on one's behalf. 3. An openhearted disposition to achieve close fraternity with one's species, for fellowship's sake. Kindliness, consideration and generosity issue spontaneously from this interest in neighbor.

Betty is an isolationist character, warped to that bias not so much by tightwad teaching as by the family fears underlying the preachment. If her mother counsels avarice, it means the mother is neurotically afraid of life, feels fearfully inadequate in facing risks, competition, etc., hence aims to be self sufficient on the "strength" of money only—all the money she can save. Peace of mind cannot be found that way.

Hospitals are jammed with the mentally ill, whose sickness is geared to withdrawal from competition and distrust of people. The only psychological security available to humans consists in maintaining mutually kindly and helpful relations with other humans equally needy. This Betty must learn from living. Books can't "reach" her until she is earnestly searching for right answers. The most you can give her is the benefit of fine example, your own. Noble association is the best education, Emerson says—and I agree. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Joyner Reed of Petersburg, Va., and Washington, and Dr. Carbo is the son of Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Carbo of Washington.

Lawrence Anthony Reed of Petersburg gave his sister in marriage. The bride wore candlelight slipper satin and lace and carried cream colored roses and white orchids. Miss Claudia Louise Carbo, the bridegroom's sister, was maid of honor, and Miss Louise Bryant of Petersburg and Mrs. John McGill of Washington were bridesmaids.

The ushers were Dr. William Cooper of Warren, Ohio, Dr. Edgar Boyland, Dr. Charles Waite and Ralph McGee, all of Washington.

A reception took place at the Columbia Country Club. The newlyweds will reside in Bethesda, Md., on return from their New England motor trip. Dr. Carbo was graduated from the Georgetown Medical School and took his residency in opthalmology at George Washington University Hospital.

Miss Jones Engaged To Harold Hughes Levy

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Jones announce the engagement of their daughter, Cecelia Mae, to Harold Hughes Levy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levy.

The bride-elect, a graduate of Wilson Teachers College, is a teacher at the W. B. Patterson School. Her fiance, an Army Air Force veteran, is attending the University of Maryland. No date has been set for the wedding.

Boiling Water Best Pre-Heat For Freezing

The most satisfactory way to preheat vegetables for home-freezing is in boiling water, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture find.

A few products like potato sticks, winter squash, broccoli and sweet potatoes preheat as well by steaming. But with the usual home equipment it's more difficult to be sure of steam or the oven to get the fast, even heating which gives the best results.

Convenient for the job is a fine, mesh-wire basket which fits into a large covered kettle, or one of the "blanchers" sold for the purpose which has fitted basket and lid. Prepared vegetables in the basket are lowered into the kettle of boiling water, covered and left just long enough to heat through. Time required differs with different vegetables so follow directions carefully, the specialists advise.

After preheating, lift the basketful out of the kettle and lower into cold water to halt the heat promptly. Running cold water or ice water is recommended.

Nutritious Meats

Besides being extremely nutritive, organ meats such as liver, kidney and heart are economical. Liver contains five times as much iron as muscle meat, and kidney and heart twice as much. All these meats are quickly and easily prepared.

Flat Nap on Upholstery Can be Raised by Hot Cloth and Stiff Brushing

DEAR ANNE:
The easy chair in my living room has had the nap on the upholstery flattened in several places where it gets the most wear. Have you any suggestion for raising the nap and improving its appearance?
R. W. M., LaPlata, Md.

A clean cloth, wrung out in very hot water, is the answer to your upholstery troubles. Spread it over the flattened area and leave about 15 minutes, allowing the steam to do its work. Then remove it. While the fabric is still slightly damp, brush the area against the pile, using a clean upholstery brush. When the spot is dry, brush once more, this time with the pile.

Another method includes the application of a wrung-out cloth, as above, but is followed by holding a warm flatiron lightly over the cloth until it is dry. Brush the area, first against the pile, then with the pile.

DEAR ANNE:
When we moved here from Connecticut, someone put my rubber gloves in with my very lovely plated silverware. It turned black wherever the rubber touched it. Silver polish does not budge it. Is there any way I can restore the finish? A. H. H., Arlington, Va.

Black spots left by rubber, salt or acids on silver are practically impossible to remove at home. You'll have to get a jeweler or metal-working firm to do it with a special buffing.

DEAR ANNE:
I have a rug I would like to dye at home. I read in the new "Living" magazine about a new dye product (trade name deleted) and am wondering if you could tell me anything about it or where it could be purchased.
B. H., Washington.

Sorry, B. H., but I haven't seen this product on sale here or had any experience with it. I'd suggest you write the magazine (or the manufacturer, if his name was given in the article) and ask where you can buy or order it.

DEAR ANNE:
I have made place mats and napkins out of monk's cloth and had hoped to monogram them with a cross-stitch. However, the weave will not permit a neat stitch. Have you any suggestions for any other type of monogramming for this material? F. H. K., Arlington, Va.

How about modern, block initials done in a plain over-and-over embroidery stitch? Another idea would be a chain stitch outline done in heavy thread.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it true that putting the coffee grounds down the sink is beneficial and helps keep drains from getting stopped up?
W. L. U., Bethesda, Md.

'Tisn't so, W. L. U., though the idea has been circulating for years. The grounds will cause eventual, if not immediate, trouble. Mixing with grease, they help build up a hard coating on the inside of the pipes and stop up the sink.

PETUNIA!

I like the lovely crispness of
My checkered cotton shirt . . .
But NOT the lumpy line it makes
Beneath my favorite skirt.

You'd be wise to cut the hem off that shirt, Petunia . . . that's what makes the ridge. Cut with pinking shears and you won't need to sew a stitch.

East, West Meet at Pakistan Garden Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

EAST met West yesterday at a party. Representatives of different countries—Great Britain, Italy, Korea, Indonesia, Russia, South Africa, and many more—attended the reception held at the Pakistan Embassy in celebration of Pakistan Day.

Guests were received from 6 to 8 in the air-cooled drawing room by the Ambassador, M. A. H. Ispahani, and Mme. Ispahani. The garden of the embassy with its lovely flower beds and old shade trees drew everyone outside, and less than 15 minutes after the hour several hundred guests had gathered on the lawn.

It's a generally accepted notion that everyone is out of town in August, but each year the Pakistan Day celebration proves otherwise. Although Pakistan has had a national day to celebrate for just a few years, the annual party has become one of Washington's most popular international dos. This is partly because of the general charm of the embassy and its garden and partly because of the warm hospitality of the Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani.

Costumes Of the Orient

A FAVORITE beauty of Washington, Mrs. Baig, wife of the Pakistan Minister, was at the fete, dressed in jade green sari with gold trim. Mme. Ispahani was in the traditional dress of Pakistan, a gharrari of peach chiffon and silver.

The Ambassador of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen, back from a holiday in North Carolina, told their friends they had given up their plans for a cruise up the Amazon and would remain in Washington four weeks before going to U. N. meetings in New York.

A reunion was held by two Biddles, Col. Anthony Biddle and Eric Biddle, who reminisced with Lord Arthur William Tedder about London in World Wars I and II. The Ambassador of South Africa, G. P. Jooste, came with the Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Goubaud-Carrera.

Minister Baig was chatting with the Russian Charge d'Affaires, Vladimir I. Bazykin, when a United States Government official drew up alongside. In introducing the latter, Mr. Baig said, "We were just talking about Korea, and of course you have been there."

"Yes, on a mission. Very interesting country," commented Mr. Bazykin.

"Especially now," said the American and the three gentlemen nodded and went different ways.

Counselor Represents Korea

THE Korean Counselor, Sae Sun Kim, escorted his pretty and petite wife; told us Ambassador John Myun Chang was in New York at U. N. The Ambassador of Italy and chic Signora Tarchiani were in the gathering, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, the Minister of Syria and Madame El-Khouri.

Others included the Ambassador of India, Mme. Pandit; the Ambassador of Indonesia and Mme. Sastroamidjojo; chief of protocol, John Farr Simmons, who will be officially sworn in on Friday; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Muir, Johkheer O. Reuchlin, Minister of the Netherlands; Capt. Floyd Ferris, George Baker of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred D. Whittemore, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Standley.

Bars and buffet lined the flower-beds, and guests seated themselves at small tables. The buffet included tomatoes stuffed with chicken salad, salmon served en gelee, turkeys thinly sliced, coffee ice cream in little cups, and countless other melting delicacies; too many to mention, too many to sample. Despite the large number of guests, ample space and perfect service made everything go off in smooth perfection.

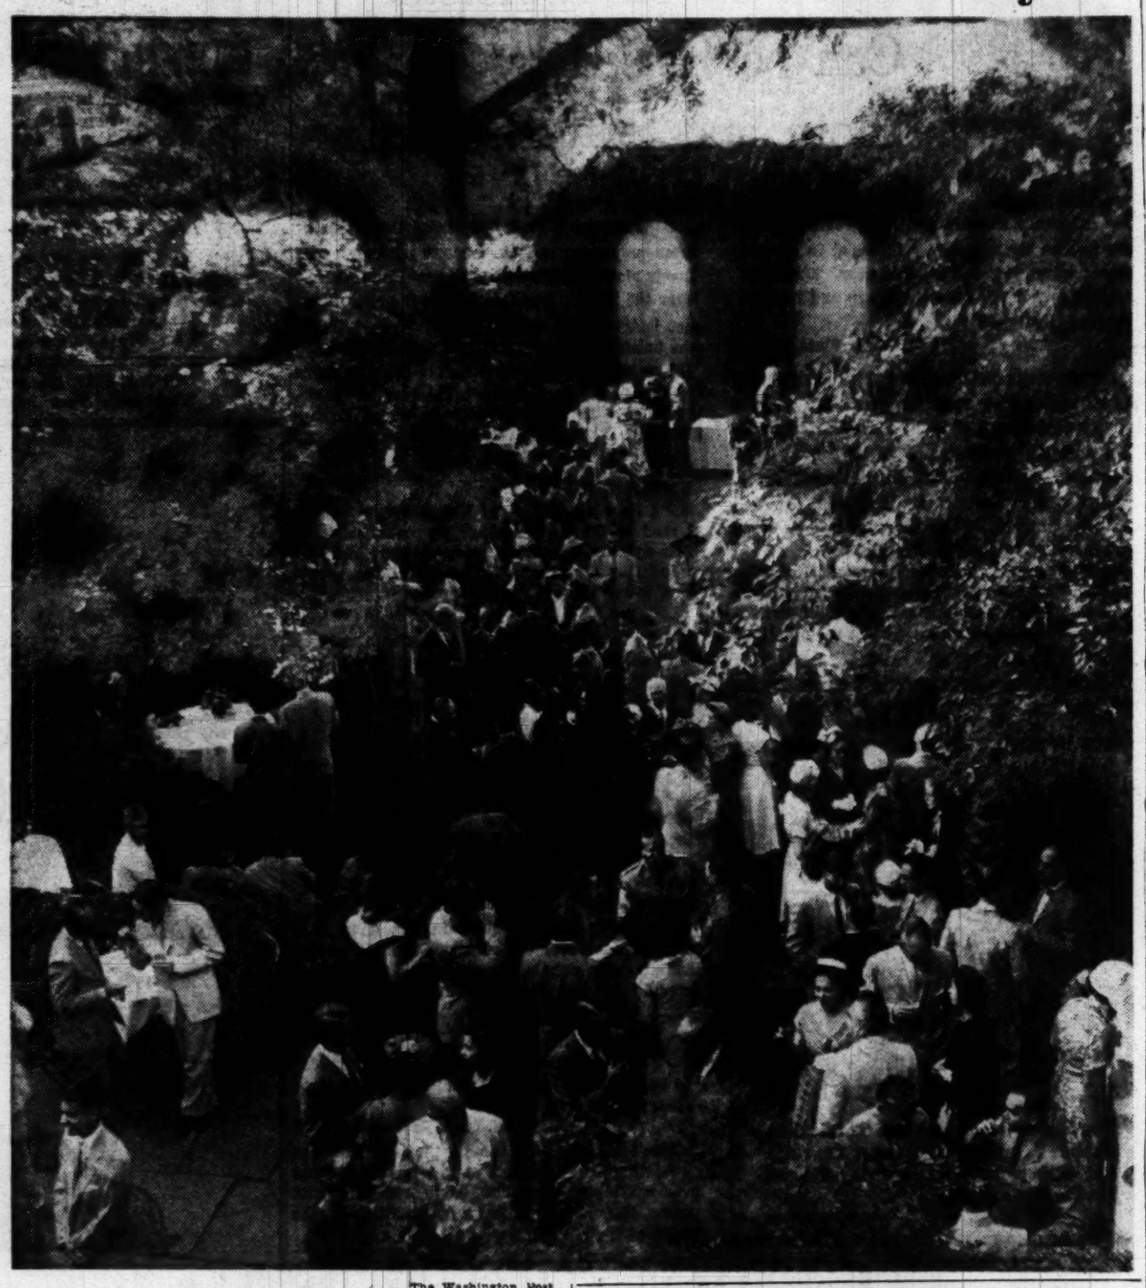
Brannans Return From Davies' Camp

THE Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan have returned from a week's visit with former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies at their camp in the Adirondacks. Like all of the Davies guests, the Brannans were invited for two weeks, but they had to cut their stay short, flying up last Monday, the 7th, and returning to Washington the following Sunday.

"It's heaven, it's unbelievable," says Mrs. Brannan. "Every night there's dancing or movies. No less than 15 are seated at meal times, and breakfast is on trays in individual cottages."

The "carry trip" is the highlight of the visit. Boats are paddled across seven lakes and carried by guides between lakes. Always a perfect hostess, Mrs. Davies provides a delicious picnic luncheon for this occasion.

Guests at the camp during the past week included Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Col. and Mrs. Alden K. Sibley, Gen. and Mrs. Virgil L. Peterson, Mrs. Millard E. Tydings and her son Joseph, and Mrs. Rahel Davies Fitch.



The Washington Post

ONE OF WASHINGTON'S favorite parties comes but once a year and then in August. It is the ceelbration of Pakistan Day on August 14. Yesterday these guests—from official, diplomatic and residential circles—joined the Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani in marking the occasion at an embassy reception held between 6 and 8 o'clock. The garden was well filled with guests before the party was more than 15 minutes under way

Miss Ferris, Fiance Honored

Miss Alwilda Ferris and her fiance, Ross A. de Matteo 2d, were guests in whose honor, Lieut. (j. g.) William E. Lucas 3d, USN, entertained last evening at a dinner party on the terrace at the Shoreham Hotel. In the company were Miss Claire Foster, Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, Miss Mary Woodhouse, Senorita Maria Theresa Castro, Comdr. Robert Hayler, USN; Dr. and Mrs. Jacques Kelly, William Hammond, and Maj. John Huba, USA.

The host, Lieut. William Lucas, is leaving Washington soon to report for duty in SanDiego, Calif.

Mrs. Junker Here

Mrs. A. F. Junker, wife of Captain Junker, U. S. N., who is on duty in Tokyo, has arrived from her home in Pittsburgh to visit Comdr. and Mrs. William S. Howell

'Faith of Our Fathers'

Whatever It Is It Can Be Improved

By Sonia Stein

"Faith of Our Fathers" is a presentation in two acts involving speech, music and dancing. I believe everybody involved in it will agree about that. But as soon as any attempt is made to pinpoint exactly what kind of presentation is being made in Rock Creek Park, all is discord.

Author Paul Green, who talked to the press yesterday afternoon before leaving for New York to work on a play, calls it a symphonic drama because it blends art forms together. The dictionary gives as one definition of symphony: any concord or agreeable blending, and the original Greek word means "a sounding together."

It might be called a pageant. The dictionary says a pageant is "an imposing exhibition or spectacular parade devised for the entertainment of the public or of some distinguished person."

"Faith of Our Fathers" is certainly an imposing exhibition agreeably blending music, dance and dialogue. I do draw the line at calling it a drama, however, which brings me to what I think is the crux of the problem out at the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater. Suppose we just forget about it being a drama and call it a pageant. This would entitle us to use an old pageant technique which will solve one of the basic problems out there.

Let's Try Dancers

Let's put actors of some physical grace—I'd even risk dancers if they can be restrained from arabesques—on that giant stage, and then put actors of some vocal grace around a battery of microphones back stage. Then the lines, which are currently forced out with such volume they lose all flexibility and variety, could be read with meaning and dramatic impact. When Lawrence Ryle, the understudy for Charles McClelland in the long George Washington role, played it for two nights last week, he began to have voice trouble. He acted with considerable skill, but his voice gave out. Even McClelland who has more voice to start with although less acting skill, finds it exhausting. There'd be none of that with the technique I suggest.

This could mean double the cast and thus double the cost, but it needn't. Actors can double for more parts than they now do, if they don't double-identify themselves with both face and voice. Actors off stage can risk playing more roles if they can modulate their voices delicately into a microphone than if they have to shout their lungs out. Furthermore, when an actor is not on stage he can be a voice for somebody else.

This technique is already in use in a couple of scenes of "Faith of Our Fathers," primarily where some important historical document is being read. As it is, it stands out most oddly, but were all the actors doing it, it would not seem strange.

Green, who fought against having the amphitheater as large as it is (the stage is 78 feet wide supplemented by two side stages of 40 feet each, and the amphitheater has over 4000 seats) because actors do get lost in it. He thought about equipping each actor with his own moving microphone but the cost was prohibitive.

Changes Usual

Green is not unalterably opposed to having actors speaking on microphones from behind the sets—in fact he's not opposed to change at all which is one of the most remarkable things about him. His other two works in the historical trilogy of which "Faith of Our Fathers" is the third, have been changed as experience dictates. "The Lost Colony," during its ten years at Manteo, N. C. and "The Common Glory" during its four years at Williamsburg, Va. have both been reworked and improved. Green finds nothing strange about this. Even his Broadway play, "Johnny Johnson" was reworked between the time it was on Broadway and the time it went between the pages of a book. He regards his purpose rather than his prose as important.

Green is a man utterly convinced of the importance of the historical presentations he has written, feeling that they help to "uncover the basic, absolutely real principle underlying our democracy." In what he calls "the death struggle between western civilization based on the Christian concept of the dignity of man, and the atheistic civilization in which man is a classless unit to be absorbed into collectivism," Green thinks that these productions can help a man "search his heart" and better understand democracy.

"Under communism, as soon as a soul gets out of line it's "liquidated," Green contends. Under a democracy, the living soul is the most precious unit."

"As Washington said," Green points out, "a nation is like a man. Loyalty and character in a man will save him, and so with a Nation." George Washington is the hero of "Faith Of Our Fathers," and Green points out that only by building heroes can a Nation be heroic. It pleases him immensely to find children in the audience, learning the message that is being put forth. He is even willing to add more comedy scenes next year, if it becomes necessary to hold the interest of the children that way, he says.

Truth Prevails

"Twenty-six great civilizations have gone down in the course of history. Nineteen of them perished from within," Green explains. And he makes it clear that he'll do what he can to keep this one from perishing.

Truth does prevail if we work for it. We have a great tradition and we are despicable if we do not hand it on greater and stronger than it came to us," he points out, which about sums up Green's purpose in his work as well as anything could.

Green even feels that the history and culture in the three presentations is "carried into the body politic" by the youngsters who appear in them as semi-professional actors. This is one of the reasons he is so set on using "neophytes who are dedicated to the theater" in his productions.

At Manteo minor celebrities are occasionally brought in to play small roles, to help bring in the audience. In the giant outdoor auditorium here it has been suggested that it would take stars from Hollywood to do it. Since there is little money available, it has to be done on a patriotic basis. Asking an actor to learn all those lines for the Washington role out of pure patriotism might strain anybody. But if they could get some big name player to come here, familiarize himself with the script just enough to read it into a backstage microphone while the regular actor played it on stage, it wouldn't be such a problem. Which brings us, I think, right back to the original point of this treatise.

Kiss Me, Kate

Watergate's Show Has That Glow

"Kiss Me, Kate" is a musical comedy that absolutely glows. It has spring, it has humor, it has robustness, it has charm.

And the road company playing it at the Watergate this week and next is by no means a second string company. Everything Cole Porter poured into the music and lyrics, they get out. Everything Sam and Bella Spewack gave to the book, they make the most of.

A show within a show, it's the sarcastic love affair of an estranged couple who are appearing together in a musical version of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew." Opening in Baltimore, en route to Broadway, the tempermental Lilli Vanessi and her short-tempered former husband, Fred Graham, tame each other backstage after each tearing and bruising a session as ever the Bard's Katherine and Petruchio played front stage.

There is little that is subtle in this show. Miss Vanessi is kept from flouncing out of the theater in mid-act, by a pair of Baltimore gangsters who have been persuaded they'll never get paid off on a gambling debt if the show closes before the actors get paid. When Miss Vanessi's politically powerful fiance is being shown up as somewhat broken down material for matrimony, it's laid on thick—all yogurt, shredded carrots and short naps.

But that's partly what makes the show so suitable for outdoor production. The humor can be screamed at full voice. The scenes are short—in fact there's not an inch of slack anywhere in the whole production. The music is exciting and full-bodied. The dancing is high, wide and handsome. The costumes are in eye-blasting colors and the performances are vigorous and hearty.

It must have been hard to find a suitable Lilli. Since Patricia Morrison created the role in New York, making abundant comedy use of her long light brown hair, it meant that a singer with beauty, comedy style and long hair had to be found. But they did it. Frances McCann, a red-head with classic beauty and well-trained voice, is also reasonable gifted as a comedienne.

She and the amiable Betty George who plays the second feminine role, are bosomy young ladies of considerable charm.

Marc Platt gets a chance to leap around the stage as the head dancer of a remarkably good dancing group which includes Charles Cook and Ernest Brown and as shapely a group of young ladies in skintight leotards as you'll find

Oriental Exclusion Barriers to Be Eased

The Senate and House passed a compromise resolution yesterday removing race as a barrier to citizenship for all aliens admitted to this country for permanent residence prior to 1926.

The bill affects aliens of Japanese, Korean and Polynesian origina.

U. S. Ports Open To Jap Vessels Again

Japanese merchant vessels will shortly start calling at United States ports for the first time since 1941, the Army announced yesterday.

The Army said that only tramp vessels engaged in bulk cargo-carrying will take part at first.

Ready for Immediate Occupancy
EXAMINE THESE FEATURES. COMPARE THEM WITH OTHER APARTMENTS, AND BE AMAZED!
1. Private entrances, and broad, private terraces for family living, face a whole mile of cool, wooded parkland.
2. Twenty individual spacious layouts of one, two, and three-bedroom units, some with bedrooms upstairs.
3. An unusual roadway system provides safety for children, with one-way traffic, and brings the car to your own front door.
4. Almost half the units are end units, with sun, air and long views on three sides.
5. Masonry walls between units provide complete soundproofing.
6. Stair-climbing reduced to a minimum, as private entrances (70 percent of total) enter directly at ground level.

'Women Aren't Men'

No Job More Exacting Than Housewife's

(Reprinted through the courtesy of The Atlantic Monthly, in the August issue of which these articles initially appeared.)

By Agnes E. Meyer

CHAPTER TWO

Now that we have amassed so much factual knowledge of the importance of the home as the basis of society, of the importance of marital relationships, of child guidance and education in general, the role of wife and mother has become infinitely more exacting and difficult. Instead of apologizing for being a "mere housewife," as so many do, women should make society realize that upon the housewife now fall the combined tasks of economist, nutrition expert, sociologist, psychiatrist, and educator. Then society would confer upon the status of housewife the honor, recognition, and acclaim it deserves. Today, however, the duties of the homemaker have become so deprecated that many women feel impelled to work outside the home in order to retain the respect of the community. It is one thing if women wish to work or must do so to help support the family. It is quite another thing—it is a destructive influence—if society forces women into the labor market in order that they may respect themselves and gain the respect of others.

Women must boldly announce that no job is more exacting, more necessary, or more rewarding than that of housewife and mother. Then they will feel free to become once more the moral force of society through the stabilization of the home. Then the influence they once wielded in society instinctively and unconsciously will become stronger than it ever has been, because they will go about the task with mind and emotions, knowledge and experience, the conscious and the unconscious forces, working in unison. With all the scientific knowledge we have amassed, women can and should be the standard bearers of a civilization higher in every respect than any we have ever known before. But they can only do this if they will accept the fact that their functions as women are very different from those of men. What a modern woman has to recapture is the wisdom that just being a woman is her central task and her greatest honor. It is a task that challenges her whole character, intelligence, and imagination.

Hopeful Indications Present

If we look at the social scene about us we find very hopeful indications that women, especially the young married women, have begun to realize these fundamental truths. The high birth rate is in itself a promising symptom. But further than that, many of these young women are carrying out their duties toward their husbands, their children, and the physical maintenance of the home with joyous intelligence and great ability. It is fair to say that there have probably never been in any civilization so many ideal marital partnerships in which husband and wife respect each other's sphere of activity, and in which both share the responsibility for the education of the children.

On the other hand, it is no less true that there have never been so many women who are dissatisfied with being women and therefore with being wives and mothers. There have never been so many women who are unnecessarily torn between marriage and a career. There have never been so many mothers who neglect their children because they find some trivial job more interesting. I know this from wide contact with neglected children. The most pathetic are those who come from well-to-do homes. The poor child whose mother has to work has some inner security because he knows in his little heart that his mother is sacrificing herself for his well-being. But the neglected child from a well-to-do home, who realizes instinctively that his mother prefers her job to him, often hates her with a passionate intensity. These are the children who frequently get into the worst difficulties because they are the most deeply hurt and resentful.

Emotions Are Atrophied

What ails these women who consciously or unconsciously reject their children? Surface influences of a competitive, materialistic world have obscured the importance of women's role as the repository of continuity and of purposeful living derived from their biological and social functions. Our technological civilization has atrophied their emotions, and nothing is more horrible than a woman whose instinctive reactions have been destroyed. They are far more egotistical than men, more fiercely aggressive, more insensitive not only to the beauty but to the decency of life. They have become masculine without even knowing it. In their defense it must be said that they are the victims of a general decline of emotional spontaneity in our civilization. Our scientific age is afraid of feeling. Why else should there be such a flood of books on youthful crime and delinquency, which repeat with a monotonous insistence that what little children need most in order to become stable personalities is the feeling of being wanted by their parents? What kind of civilization have we built when fathers and mothers need to have it drilled into them by psychiatrists, sociologists, and other experts that they are creating social monsters because they do not love the children they have brought into the world?

I am not trying to drive all women back into the home. The married woman who is rebellious about family life does her children more harm by staying home in such a frame of mind than by leaving them to some kindly relative or sending them to boarding school. It is the frame of mind of such women that is wrong, that must be understood and changed. For these women are equally disastrous as an influence in their working environment. God protect us all from the efficient, go-getter businesswoman whose feminine instincts have been completely sterilized. Wherever women are functioning, whether in the home or in a job, they must remember that their chief function as women is a capacity for warm, understanding, and charitable human relationships. Women are throwing their greatest natural gift out of the window when they cease to function as experts in cooperative living.

Dualistic Conflict Exists

It is distressing, therefore, to hear the oft repeated plaint that woman must be a personality first and a woman only secondarily. This cliche revives in a new form the dualistic conflict between nature and spirit, body and mind, the conscious and the unconscious, which weakens all personality, whether male or female, but is especially disastrous to woman at a time when an arid and strictly academic education has already dangerously widened the gap between her emotional and intellectual capacities. Are women people? Only to the extent that they fuse their inherited and acquired characteristics into a dynamic, harmoniously functioning unity which alone is worthy of being called personality.

WEDNESDAY: Too much emphasis on success; too little on service.

Gen. Clark Warns National Guard To Train Quickly

Fort Monroe, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Gen. Mark Clark, chief of the Army field forces, today told commanders of National Guard units soon to be activated into Federal service, their task is to prepare their organizations quickly to fight as trained units.

"We shall outline here at this conference the training programs designed to bring your units to combat readiness with the minimum of delay," Clark said. Present at the conference were commanders of four National Guard divisions and two regimental combat teams.

"Your units are badly needed and it is your job to prepare them for whatever mission may be ahead," Clark told the group.

British Carrier Slated for Korea Found Damaged

Portsmouth, England, Aug. 14 (AP).—A possible case of sabotage aboard the Korea-bound aircraft carrier Thesus was disclosed today by the Royal Navy.

A Navy spokesman said wiring that led to the ship's gyro compass was founded slashed. The damage was "easily reparable."

The Theseus left today for Spithead for trials. It is expected to leave for the Orient Friday. A 10,000-tonnner, it carries 40 planes and a crew of 850.

The incident was the latest of a dozen involving ships of the Royal Navy. Most serious was a fire last month that blew up nine ammunition lighters in the harbor here. This resulted in claims by civilian residents of the area totaling more than £100,000 ($280,000).

Patrick Randall French, who will be two in November, was a little boy lost yesterday.

He went to meet his daddy, Major Thomas R. French, U. S. A. F., but he was a bit early. The whole French family usually meets the major, but at 5 p. m., not at 3 p. m., the time Patrick picked.

He spent an hour in the Arlington police station before the Frenchs, who live at 701 S. 25th st., Arlington, discovered and recovered him.

Guerillas Slay Four

Saigon, French Indochina, Aug. 14 (U.P.)—Black-clad guerilla raiders killed four French citizens, wounded three and kidnaped five others in an attack on a movie house in Chup, Cambodia, Saturday night, it was announced here today.

Plaid Dinner Jacket Insults Very Easily

By John Crosby

BARRY GRAY—for the benefit of the early-to-bed, early-to-rise crowd—is a late-at-night disk jocket who once operated from WOR, New York, and is now affixed to a WMCA microphone from midnight to 3 a. m. every morning. Among disk jockets, Mr. Gray is considered eccentric in that he virtually never spins, as they say, a platter. Instead, he talks.

Crosby

Or rather he criticizes, the field of his criticism being without limit. At various times he has fearlessly attacked the singing voice of Bing Crosby, the polemics of Westbrook Pegler, the way women cut their hair, and almost any other topic generally considered sacred by more timid critics like myself. Lately, he has been whaling away at men's fashions, even to the extent of assaulting that towering authority in the field, "Esquire."

"Plaid dinner jackets!" Gray declared scornfully the other night. "I said they wouldn't last. And they didn't. Imagine! You're invited to a real formal-type dinner. The invitation says white tie. You show up in a plaid dinner jacket. You're trying to negotiate, say, a loan from the vice-president of the Chase National Bank. He looks at you in this plaid dinner jacket and he says: 'I don't dig this guy!' You're dead."

The Prescient Type

YOU got to hand it to this man, Gray. He's what they call prescient. It so happens I was at a very formal-type dinner the other night, trying to negotiate this here loan from this here vice-president of the Chase National Bank, and I was wearing a plaid dinned jacket.

The conversation opened just like the man said. This here vice-president of the Chase National nudged Mrs. Tiffany Saportas, who happened to be sitting between us, and says: "Who's the torpedo on your left? That plaid dinner jacket! I don't dig the guy."

"A crumb!" says Mrs. Saportas. "Definitely!"

Scorn, He Gives

WELL, I don't take that kind of talk from no vice-president of no Chase National Bank, loan or no loan. I gave him a look that would chill the chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corp. "White tie!" says I, and it's the way I said it that gave it what you might call inflection. "That Chase National mob must be dead from the heels up. Whoever heard of a white tie at a formal-type dinner like this? Them things went out with Ulysses S. Grant. An undertaker wouldn't put that thing on a corpse."

"You fracture me," says this here vice-president coldly. "And where, may I ask, do you get your information from, if I may make so bold as to inquire?"

"From 'Esquire,'" says I triumphantly. "Where else? If you small change dips at the Chase National would just get your noses out of the Racing Form for a minute and read some high class literature, you'd know how to come to a formal-type party, properly dressed."

Right, After All

WELL, Gray was right. I was dead so far as the loan was concerned. But, after all, a guy has his pride. And, it so happens I didn't need his filthy money anyway. Two days later me and the boys, with the assistance of a little nitroglycerin, negotiated a loan from the Guaranty Trust Co., a hep institution. We wore our plaid dinner jackets, too. No vice-president from no Chase National Bank is going to tell me what to wear while I'm in the process of negotiation.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Lines to a Housefly, Or 'Musca Domestica'

Equipped with speed and sec-tioned eyes . . . He'll take on comers, any size . . . He'll wait until I pounce, and then . . . He's off to taunt me, once again.

Oh, why would Nature make him fleet . . . With little suction cups for feet . . . Which, when I chase him, senses reeling . . . Give him refuge on my ceiling?

I'll never cease this pest to cuss . . . The durned old fly domesticus . . . He gives me trouble, doubly piled . . . That's why it's me—not he—that's wild.

Jean Broulik

VACATION DAZE

Getting my family packed for a vacation trip is an undertaking of a magnitude that would compare favorably with the job of moving one of the smaller Government agencies from one city to another.

It takes work, planning, diligence and—above all—patience.

By common agreement, we make no effort to take along either the sink or the refrigerator. But minor differences do crop up on several other items.

When it appears that all is lost, and we are destined to set out with furniture strapped to the roof, I play my trump card. "Okay," I say, "have it your way. But if you take the steamer trunk, that will fill up the entire back seat and all three of us will have to ride up front."

The prospect of 5000 miles of riding three-on-a-seat has a sobering effect. At least 50 cubic feet of junk goes back into the closets.

This year, as usual, I had steeled myself for the annual Packing Week Debate. But in several days of suitcase stuffing, not one crisis arose.

Nobody suggested that we take along our tennis rackets, two portable radios, a bicycle, baseball bats and gloves, skates, an Erector set, a pup tent, or even golf clubs. It appeared that, for once, we'd have enough room.

In fact, our preparations progressed so logically that I began to suspect that I had overlooked something. I had one of those something-is-missing feelings.

It wasn't until last night that I was reminded what it was.

"Don't forget," cautioned the lady of the house, "that as we start out we've got to drive past the Boy Scout camp and pick up Walter. And be sure to leave some room for his stuff. It isn't packed yet."

My present calculations are that there will be just room enough for my 14-year-old relative's impedimenta if I go by train.

COE MISSED IT

Dramatic Critic Richard Coe took his vacation at the wrong time. He missed one of the season's most interesting performances.

It was staged at the home of Sheila Graham of 230 Emerson st. nw., with whom age group, and a dime for everybody over 12.

Between acts they hustled up a brisk business in lemonade and cookies, and when the evening was over found themselves with a smash hit, to the tune of $12.24.

This sum was dutifully brought to me just before I left on vacation, with instructions that it be forwarded to Children's Hospital.

Let's see Coe dig up a story like that on his beat.

PERSONAL NOTES

SHEILA AND BARBARA

I am madly in love. Sheila is 8 going on 9.

The name of the production was "The Fairy and the Doll," a play swiped out of a library book. Sheila was half of the cast, and the other half was Barbara Grohs of 242 Emerson st. nw., a more mature young lady with whom I am also madly in love. Barbara is a spinster of 11.

The girls charged a sliding scale of 3 cents for children under 5, a nickel for the 5-to-12

4 Grab $6000 From Bank Car In Baltimore

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—A gang of armed bandits intercepted a bank messenger car today and escaped with $6000 loot in a stolen getaway car, the owner of which was locked in the trunk.

Fred W. Bounds, one of two guards in the bank automobile, told police the robbery was executed with split-second precision when he stopped at an intersection.

Half an hour later police got a telephone call from James Washington, 28. He said he had just freed himself from his automobile trunk, where a gunman had imprisoned him at 3 a. m., almost seven hours before the holdup.

Investigators said Washington's vehicle apparently was the one used by the bandits.

Bounds and a fellow guard, Howard Heiser, reported they were confronted by three gunmen as they stopped behind another automobile at the boulevard.

Washington said his captor had forced him to drive several blocks early today to pick up "two or three" more men. He was then forced out of the car and stuffed into the trunk.

For the next six hours the auto was "in motion," he said, stopping only once for gasoline. When the car finally came to a halt, he got hold of a pair of pliers, snipped the cord binding his hands, and forced open the trunk door, he said.

The guards gave descriptions tallying with those of four men believed responsible for a series of armed robberies at downtown loan offices. One office was robbed twice within two weeks last month.

Farm Wife, Crowds Await Vision Today

Necedah, Wisc., Aug. 14 (AP).—The magnets of faith and curiosity drew an increasing number of visitors today into this sand country hamlet where a farm wife tells of visions of the Virgin Mary.

Mrs. Anna Van Hoof says she will see the Mother of God for the seventh time at noon Tuesday. By then the crowd may reach 100,000 persons.

Visitors came despite a Roman Catholic Church admonition to its faithful to remain at home.

In the midst of the excitement, Mrs. Van Hoof 40-year-old mother of seven, tried to go about her farm duties between appearances demanded by the multitude.

Mrs. Van Hoof claims the first apparition occurred last November, and that five have followed. All are said to take place in a clump of trees near her home. She says the most recent vision was on June 16, at which time the Virgin promised to return August 15 and October 7.

Argentine Ski Meet Off—Too Much Snow!

San Carlos De Bariloche, Argentina, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The opening of Argentina's ninth annual skiing championship was postponed today because of too much snow.

A heavy storm left this fahionable Andean winter resort snowbound, with drifts 5 feet deep in some places.

Wool for Defense Critically Short

By Jack Anderson and Fred Blumenthal

(While Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation, his column will be written by members of his staff.—Editor's Note.)

The reason Hitler lost the battle of Stalingrad was because Nazi troops lacked protective woolen clothing to continue the sub-zero siege. Many froze to death before the German retreat.

Senator Hunt

However, this historic lesson has been lost on our own munitions board, which has been even more remiss in stockpiling wool for the war effort than in building reserves of vital manganese. As a result, we are desperately short of wool for uniforms, overcoats, socks, blankets, etc., to carry on a prolonged war.

That is why the State Department today is trying frantically to make a subrosa deal, through the British, for purchase of the 1950 Australian wool crop before the international auctions late this month. The reason is to head off the Russians, preparing to outbid us in the Australian market by offering sky-high prices.

Painful story behind this is that the Quartermaster Corps and members of Congress have been pleading for more than a year with the munitions board to begin stockpiling wool.

Col. Frank M. Stedman of the Quartermaster Corps, in a letter to the board last April 13, warned that "time is short" with supplies of apparel wool the "lowest since 1940." On July 25, a month after the Korean war started, the Quartermasters reported domestic wool stocks were "sufficient only to keep mills in operation until November 1, 1950," adding:

"All existing stocks are reported to be contracted for by clothing manufacturers, so that only a freeze order would make them available for military requirements."

Senator Lester Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of an Armed Services subcommittee set up to investigate scarce materials, also has been unable to prod the munitions brass hats into action.

Though Hunt and his colleague, Joe O'Mahoney, represent the biggest wool-producing State in the Nation, they have unselfishly urged the Munitions Board to begin large-scale purchases in foreign markets.

Note—One of those chiefly responsible for the Munitions Board "wool" policy is Maj. Gen. Patrick W. Timberlake, staff director.

Vandenberg Has Relapse

Senator Arthur Vanderberg (R., Mich.), suffered a serious relapse in Georgetown Hospital last Sunday afternoon. He is now in a very critical condition.

Doctors believe that Vandenberg—one of the great Americans of our time—will not be able to return to his crucial post in the Senate.

The medical men have limited his visitors to members of his immediate family.

Harriman's Trip

The inside reason for Averell Harriman's flying trip to Tokyo wasn't to scold General MacArthur for conferring with Chiang Kai-shek, as the dopesters have reported. Instead, President Truman simply got impatient waiting for MacArthur's report and sent Harriman to get it.

Ironically, the detailed report from MacArthur reached Washington after Harriman was already en route. So he made the trip for nothing.

Actually, Truman knew in advance that MacArthur planned to meet Chiang Kai-shek—though the time hadn't been set. The President also didn't trust Secretary of Defense Johnson to relay an accurate report, because of Johnson's strong pro-Chiang sympathies.

Admission by Malik

Inside the U. N. Security Council: Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik is in the Kremlin doghouse because he let United States Delegate Warren Austin needle him into saying that the only Russian arms possessed by the North Koreans were those "which we sold them when Soviet forces withdrew from Korea."

This is the first time Malik or any other Soviet leader admitted that the North Koreans are using Soviet weapons.

More important, from the standpoint of the United States, it made wonderful propaganda when we discovered Soviet military equipment in Korea that wasn't there when the Russians withdrew. This exposed Malik as a liar before the world.

Background on Reds

In preparation for the coming campaign, House GOP members are getting some expert "indoctrination" on Communism in a series of three secret lectures.

The last of these lectures, scheduled for tomorrow night at Washington's Hotel Continental, will be made by James Burnham, a former Marxist now on the faculty of New York University.

Recently returned from Europe, Burnham will discuss "Soviet Strategy for World Conquest." Last week Dr. Stefan Possony, a Viennese who teaches geopolitics at Georgetown University, spoke on "American and Soviet Foreign Policies."

The week before, GOP Congressmen got a briefing on "Stalin's International Apparatus" by Josef Zack, a former Communist and member of the party's Central Executive Committee in the United States.

All three lecturers bear down on the fact that we are too "soft" with Communists and haven't done an effective counterpropaganda job. The GOP politicis are being urged by their leaders to make campaign speeches tieing in this "professional" data on Red activities with "laxity" by the Democratic Administration.

GOP Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts frankly told his colleagues at the first secret session that the lectures would provide good "campaign material."
